

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

The following study of the several texts of the Charter of Christ, substantially in its present form, was submitted to the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College in May, 1912, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. With the exception of the Kent Charter, which is reprinted from the text published by W. D. Macray in Notes and Queries (9th Series, Vol. VIII, p. 240), and of the Fairfax text of the Short Charter, which was printed by B. Fehr in Herrig's Archiv (CVI. 69-70), none of the texts presented in the following pages has hitherto been printed. For the text of the Long Charter in Cotton ms. Calig. A. ii, as also for the texts of the Short Charter in mss. Sloane 3292, Stowe 620 and Harl. 116, I have availed myself of transcripts which Professor Carleton Brown kindly placed at my disposal. In the case of the Short Charter in St. John's College Cambridge ms. B. 15, and Carta Libera, in ms. E. 24 of the same library, as well as the extract from Carta Celestis Hereditatis (Appendix II), I have used transcripts made for me by Alfred Rogers, Esq., of the Cambridge University Library. For the fragmentary text in the manuscript at Magdalen College, Oxford, I am indebted to the courtesy of the Librarian, Rev. H. A. Wilson, who put himself to much trouble to transcribe this text and sent me also a full description of the manuscript. For all the other texts which are printed herewith I have depended directly on rotographs of the original manuscripts.

I am glad to have this opportunity of acknowledging my great indebtedness to Professor Carleton Brown of Bryn Mawr College, who first suggested the subject of this investigation, and directed my attention to the larger part of the manuscript material. To him I am under obligations also for helpful criticism in revising the dissertation preparatory to its publication, and for reading the proof sheets.

The classification of the numerous texts of the Charter of Christ and the study of the sources of the material were undertaken under the direction of Dr. Samuel Moore, in 1911-12 of Bryn Mawr College, now of the University of Wisconsin. To his assistance and encouragement throughout the preparation of the dissertation, I am greatly indebted. He has also courteously read the proof sheets as it was passing through the press.

In conclusion I desire to express my appreciation of the kindness shown by the Rev. Father Amadée Viger, O. S. A., Master of Novices, and Doctor Tourscher, O. S. A., Librarian of the Monastery Library at Villanova, Pennsylvania, in placing the books of the Library at my disposal and in obtaining special references for me; I also wish to thank the Librarians of Harvard University, the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, Overbrook, Pennsylvania, for permission to use these libraries, and especially Miss Mary L. Jones, Librarian of the Bryn Mawr College Library, for repeated kindnesses.

INTRODUCTORY

The Charter of Christ belongs to a class of mediæval allegorical compositions, constituting a literary type, in which the theme is developed under the figure of a legal charter or grant. In the Charter of Christ, the allegory is explicit; essentially, this document purports to be a grant of Heaven's bliss, made to mankind by the Saviour, upon condition that man give, in return, his love to God and to his neighbor¹ (an implied reference to the two great commandments of the Law). The structure of this Charter is based, in general, upon that of its legal prototype; in some versions even the formulae that mark the several divisions of the mediæval legal charter occur either in Latin or in English translation. Like the legal charter, moreover, one of the texts of the Charter of Christ is written in Latin prose; most of them, however, are in English verse.

Instead of the term "Charter," ordinarily employed for the grant by Christ to mankind, one finds in three manuscripts² the title Testamentum Christi. For this designation, more than one explanation may be suggested. In the first place, the Charter of Christ may have come to be thought of as a dying bequest through its definite connection with the death on the Cross. Again, the term testamentum was not restricted in the Middle Ages to instruments for the disposal of property after death, but was often employed, as DuCange notes,³ of any kind of charter or deed of gift.⁴

¹ There are also other minor requirements.

⁴ In the 15th cent. the word testament had also another meaning. The New English Dictionary (s. v. testament) records the erroneous acceptation, testimony, witness, and cites Sir G. Haye, Law Arms

But although testamentum in this more general sense may have been perfectly understood in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, it is an unfortunate term to-day to designate the Charter of Christ, since it tends to confuse it with the Last Will and Testament, which constitutes a wholly distinct literary type.⁵ To this latter class belong a host of Testaments, both religious and secular, among them, for example, the Testament of Christ in Deguileville's Pèlerinage de la Vie Humaine.⁶

(1456): "The pape convertit . . . by his testament." Whether or not this meaning was common in the Middle Ages, or existed earlier than the 15th cent. there does not appear to be sufficient evidence to determine. It is possible that compositions such as the Testament of Love may have derived their title from such an application. As to this cf. Skeat: "Professor Morley well says that 'the writer of this piece [the Testament of Love] uses the word Testament in the old Scriptural sense of a witnessing, and means by Love the Divine Love" (Chaucerian and Other Pieces, in Complete Works of Geoffrey Chaucer VII—supplementary vol. Oxford 1897—p. xxviii). I cannot, however, discover any evidence of an old Scriptural sense of witnessing for the word testament, nor any instance of such a meaning being applied to it in England earlier than the 15th cent. In France, the "Testament" of Jean de Meung furnishes evidence that the title was applied at least as early as the beginning of the 14th cent. to compositions having no Will element.

⁶ Another well known form is the Testament of the Christian, fifteenth century (Rel. Antiq. I. 260), in which the Christian leaves his body to the earth, his sins to the fiend, his goods to the world, and his soul to God. One similar to this is recorded in E. Hoskins's Horæ Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, or Sarum and York Primers (London 1901) 370. For other testaments, religious and secular, see H. R. Lang, Oancioneiro Gallego-Castelhano (New York 1902) 174 ff. (for which reference I am indebted to the kindness of Dr. Lang), and a monograph by Dr. E. C. Perrow, The Last Will and Testament as a Form of Literature, which is soon to appear in the Wisconsin Academy Series. Dr. Perrow has kindly permitted me to see the proof-sheets of this article. Cf. also H. Thien, Ueber die Eng. Marienklagen (Kiel 1906) 82.

The apocryphal work, Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi,

The ambiguity arising from a loose application of the title is well illustrated in Professor George C. Taylor's article, The Relation of the English Corpus Christi Play to the Middle English Religious Lyric.⁷ Under the general term testament, he includes, without distinction,⁸ poems in which Christ is represented in the first person, a) as making His will, b) as granting a charter to man, c) as lamenting man's ingratitude and reproaching him for it; hence, when later he proceeds to discuss the influence of Christ's Testament upon the Middle English Drama, it is uncertain to which type of composition he is referring: "In the English passion play there is no more evidence that the planctus [Mariae] was the germ or starting point of the passion plays than there is for the Christ's Testament. . . . So far as I have been able to discover, it seems by no means certain assigned by Mgr. Rahmani to the end of the second century, and by J. Cooper and A. J. McLean to about 350 A. D., is of a different type, being an apocryphal compilation of canons and ordinances for Church government. In the Syriac ms. it also bears the title, First and Second Books of St. Clement. It is doubtless called Testament of Christ, because it embodies such ecclesiastical regulations as Christ was supposed to have instructed the Apostles to enjoin upon the Church.

I add here a note concerning a testament, apparently not extant, entitled, Librum de Testamento Christi in Cruce. It is ascribed by Fabricius—Bibl. Lat. Med. et Infimæ Aetatis (Florence 1858) i. 18—to "Aegidius Aurifaber Vossio, aliis Fabri, Carmelitanus," who (according to Fabricius) died in 1506. Of the authorities cited by Fabricius, only Alegrius—Paradisus Carmel. Decoris (Lugd. 1639) 380—mentions De Testamento Christi in Cruce as the work of Aegidius—"de Aegidio Fabri [Aurifaber]"; but neither of the authorities of Alegrius appears to mention this Testamentum. I have no other knowledge of the work. It does not appear to be in the British Museum. Whether it is actually a testament, or whether it is a charter miscalled testament, cannot be decided from the above data concerning it.

that the planctus was dramatized any earlier than the Testament of Christ.”⁹ Since, however, there appears to be no example either of the Last Will and Testament or of Christ’s Charter in the Middle English drama,¹⁰ the type that Professor Taylor here has in mind is undoubtedly the Lament, or Complaint, of Christ, a motive repeatedly utilized in the Passion and Judgment plays.¹¹ The essence of this form is the Saviour’s reproach, “Man, this have I done for thee; what hast thou done for Me?”¹² It makes no bequests and ⁹ Op. cit. p. 9.

¹⁰ In the Digby Burial of Christ, however, there is an interesting reference to Christ’s Body as a parchment book, written in bloody letters:

Mawdley—

271 ‘Cum hithere, Ioseph, beholde & looke,
How many bludy letters ben wreten in þis buke,
Small margente her is.’

Ioseph—

274 ‘Ye, this parchment is stritchit owt of syse.’

¹¹ See, for example, York Plays (ed. L. T. Smith) Crucifixio Christi vv. 253-58; Towneley Plays (E. E. T. S.) Crucifixion, stanza 38; Digby Plays (E. E. T. S.) Burial of Christ vv. 277-282, Joseph’s speech, “O all the pepill that passis hereby,” etc. For a list of Complaints of Christ see Taylor, The Relation of the Middle English Corpus Christi Play to the Middle English Religious Lyric (Mod. Phil. v. 8, footnote). See also Cook, Christ 208 ff. (ed. 1900). To these I add the following: Complaints of Christ in Bonner Beitr. xiv. 128, 208, 210; Rich. Rolle i. 118-119 (in the 2nd arrow); Leg. Aurea (Nuremberg 1488) fol. LXVIII (2nd. col)—LXVIII^b; Firmiani Lactantii Opera, ed. Migne, Tom. II. cols. 283-286, a poem of doubtful authorship on the Passion; and the following in mss. for which I am indebted to Professor Brown, who has kindly permitted me to copy the references from his MS. transcripts:—Caius Coll. 174, p. 481; Camb. Univ. Ff. 5. 48, fol. 43 b; Bod. Tanner 110, fol. 238 a (also in Caius Coll. Camb. 84, p. 180).

¹² Cook (Mod. Lang. Notes VII. 134-137, and Christ p. 208) suggests Lamentations i. 12: o vos omnes qui transitis per viam, attendite et videte si est dolor sicut dolor meus, as a possible source for the Complaints of Christ, and adds that in the Sarum use this verse is employed as follows:—1) as Antiphon for Lauds in Saturday of the grants no deed, and is thus distinct both from the Testament (properly so called) and from the Charter.

Accordingly, I have found it advisable, for the sake of avoiding ambiguity, to employ the title Charter and not Testament for those compositions which have the actual Paschal vigil; 2) as Respond to the ninth lesson of the 3rd Nocturn of the same day; 3) as part of the first lesson for the 1st Nocturn of Good Friday. It appears to me that Cook is certainly right. See also York Breviary I. (Surtees Soc. LXXI. 1880) Feria Sexta in Parasceue domini, Lectio VIII. col. 393, where the same verse is used. Out of this verse, there seem to have developed a number of forms. One of the commonest has for theme the words, In cruce sum pro te; qui peccas, desine pro me! to which are often prefixed a few lines such as the following:

*Aspice mortalis, fuit umquam passio talis?
Peccatum sperne, pro quo mea vulnera cerne
Aspice qui transis, quia tu mihi causa doloris, etc.*

According to John Weever these and similar verses were often inscribed under crucifixes or pictures of Christ in old Abbey Churches; see Weever's Ancient Funeral Monuments (1631) 117-118, and 488; see also Rich. Rolle I. 434; ms. Trin. Coll. Camb. 323, no. 8; ms. Emman. Coll. Camb. 106 (14th cent.) art. 10d, fol. 36: Tu qui es gardes ma figure | Jeo su deu tu ma facture (address of Christ on the Cross). It occurs also in countless other places. Another development of the same theme takes the form, Homo uide quid pro te patior, an English version of which appears in ms. Trin. Coll. Camb. 1157, fol. 69: "O man unkynde, haue thow yn mynde my passion smert," etc. See also ms. Phillips 8336, Art. 18: Vous ke me veez en la croiz morir E pur l'amour de vous si dure mort souffrir. Miss F. A. Foster of Bryn Mawr College called my attention to this poem, recorded in an account of the manuscript by Paul Meyer, Romania XIII. 518. Again, a third type is found in Christ's reproach to His people, York Breviary I. Dominica quarta Quadragesime, Lectio IX, col. 334; Popule meus, quid feci aut quid molestus fui tibi? Richard Rolle (Med. de Passione Domini, Horstmann, R. R. I. 88) enlarges upon this theme, which has given rise to a number of Complaints, as for instance that (mentioned by Taylor) in Das Alsfelder Passionsspiel in Das Drama des Mittelalters III. (Deut. Nat. Litt. XIV. Stuttgart) 764-65, and also another in the Frankfurter Passionsspiel of 1493, Das Drama des Mittelalters II. 505-06: O liebes folck, sage mir an: was han ich dir zu leide getan, etc.

Charter form, or in which the Deed is the organizing element of the piece, as in the Long Charter.¹⁸ ¹⁸ Dr. Perrow (op. cit.) thinks that the use of the title testament for the Long Charter, Version A (my own designation for the text contained in mss. Vernon etc., see pp. xiv ff.) might be justified on the ground that this Charter contains: a) the autobiographical element, which he has shown to be a frequent feature of the legal testament and its imitations; b) the same subject matter as the New Testament (of the Bible), which he believes was regarded as Christ's Last Will; c) the Last Will of Jesus. On the other hand, it may be replied, first that neither autobiography nor the subject matter of the New Testament is peculiar to the type known as the Last Will and Testament, since these features often appear in various other types of composition, such as the Complaint and the Passion poems; and secondly, that the Will of Christ occupies but eight lines out of 234 in the shortest version of the Long Charter, the organizing element being the Deed itself, which forms the centre of unity in the poem. It seems to me, therefore, that testament as a title for this version of the Charter, as well as for those consisting merely of the Deed, is misleading.

CLASSIFICATION OF MATERIAL

§ 1. EXTANT CHARTERS OF CHRIST

There are five distinct compositions extant which belong to the literary type known as the "Charter of Christ." These are:

I. A Latin prose charter, of about twenty-one lines, entitled Carta Domini Nostri Iesu Christi, in a vellum manuscript of the fifteenth century, Brit. Mus. Add. 21253, which belonged in 1633 to John Edwards of Stansti, and is chiefly made up of Latin homilies for Sundays throughout the year.¹ The Charter (f. 186^a-186^b) manifestly forms part of a homiletical discourse. The document itself is followed by the application, presented in the form of a curious analogy: as in civil law, a son may not receive the inheritance of a father who has been slain by an enemy, unless he pursue and avenge his father's death upon the slayer; so man, a sinner, may not receive the heavenly inheritance granted by Christ's Charter, unless he pursue and destroy sin, the slayer of our Father Christ. This text, which, so far as I am aware, has never before been printed, will be found in Appendix II.

II. A Latin poem, of from thirty-six to thirty-eight lines, entitled, in ms. St. John's Coll. Camb. E. 24, Carta Libera d. n. Ihesu Christi, and in ms. D. 8 of the same college, Carta Redempcionis humane. Ms. E. 24 is a vellum manuscript of the fourteenth century, with twenty-six lines to ¹ See Cat. of Add. to the MSS. in the Brit. Mus. in the Years 1854-1860 (London 1875) 347-8. Where place of publication is omitted below, London is to be understood, and titles to catalogues are occasionally otherwise simplified.

Vernon text of A, by Horstmann and Furnivall, as cited above.

3) Version C, preserved, so far as I am aware, in but one manuscript, Royal 17, C xvii., of the first half of the fifteenth century, is much longer than B, containing six hundred and eighteen lines. It includes all but fifty-seven lines of B, and has in addition two hundred and fifty-seven lines which are not found in either B or A. These consist chiefly of digressions and enlargements. Of the fifty-seven lines of the B-text which are here lacking, twenty-nine appear to have been accidentally dropped by some scribe (see below, pp. lxxxvii ff.). Differences in the readings of lines common to C and B will be discussed in Chapter IV. Version C has also been printed by Dr. Furnivall in comparison with the Vernon text.

A text of the Charter of Christ which may perhaps be merely another manuscript of the Short Charter, is described by Dr. Furnivall in the Athenaeum for November 11, 1876 (p. 623), as follows:

"An Early English Poem in the form of a legal deed or Grant by Christ to mankind of his love and life, reserving the rent of men's faith and obedience; the deed being sealed with Christ's seal on the Cross, etc., all in regular legal form." According to Dr. Furnivall, the poem occurs at the end of a Latin sermon in a manuscript possessed by the Bedford Library at that time, and of a date later than the thirteenth (?) century. I learn further that on June 17, 1904, this manuscript was sold at Sotheby's (Lot. 457), for £9, to Bernard Quaritch. This is the only information I have been able to obtain regarding this text. Though the grant described above (Christ's love and life) does not correspond with that in the Short Charter (Heaven's bliss), the Reservation clause appears to be the same, and the form of the Deed, the seal, etc., suggests the Short Charter.

1) Version A, normally two hundred and thirty-four lines, is represented by seven manuscripts, of which two (ms. Rawl. poet. 175 and ms. Vernon) belong to the fourteenth century, and the others to the fifteenth century. This text has already been printed from the Vernon manuscript by Horstmann³ and Dr. Furnivall.⁴ Version A is the shortest and simplest of the three. Christ addresses man directly, and after briefly reproaching him for his ingratitude, in the manner of the Complaint of God,⁵ He tells him of the heavenly inheritance that He has bestowed upon him. This gift was made, the Lord explains, by His birth into the world; it was confirmed in the Passion, and the Deed of it was written upon the parchment of His Body. He concludes by telling man of the Indenture left him as surety for the gift, and admonishes him to pay his rent and keep from sin. If man will faithfully do these things, he may claim his inheritance when he will. The allegory upon which the poem is based consists in representing Christ's Body as the Charter—the actual crucified Body being the original document, and the Sacramental Body being the Indenture, the copy delivered to man.

2) Version B, containing four hundred and eighteen lines in its most reliable form, occurs in six manuscripts of the fifteenth century. It includes nearly all of the text of A, and two hundred lines in addition, some of which consist of digressions, and some of explanatory and transitional passages. There are also important differences between the texts of A and B in the lines which are common to both; these will be considered in Chapter IV. The text of ms. Harl. 2382 has been printed in comparison with the

⁴ Minor Poems of the Vernon ms. Part II. (E. E. T. S. Orig. Ser. 117) 637-57.

from the benefits of the Pardon. The final formulae—In cuius rei testimonium and Teste Rege (or me ipso) apud, etc.—are lacking.

The two documents described below are inaccessible to me. From the accounts given of them, they appear to be Pardons similar to that which Furnivall attributes to Hoccleve:

I. "A General Free Pardon or Charter of Hevyn's Blys, compiled in our old Englyssh Tong in 1400." Dibdin,⁸ from whom I obtained the reference, says it was issued by Lant's⁹ press, though he assigns no date for its appearance.

II. The General Pardon, described in 1853 by Charles C. Babington,¹⁰ of St. John's College, Cambridge, as follows:

"An imperfect copy of a small tract (measuring five and a half inches by three and a half inches) has recently come into my hands, of which I much desire the wanting parts. It is entitled: 'The General Pardon, geuen longe agone, and sythe newly conformed, by our Almighty Father, with many large Priuileges, Grauntes, and Bulles graunted for euer, as is to be seen hereafter: Drawne out of Frenche into English. By Wyllyam Hayward.¹¹ Imprinted at London, by Wyllyam How, for Wyllyam Pickeringe.'" "There is no date," says Mr. Babington, "but it is believed to have been printed in or about 1571. It is in black letter, and is an imitation of the Roman Catholic pardons. It consists of twelve leaves.

⁸ Typ. Antiq. III. (London 1816) 582, footnote. Herbert, according to Dibdin, refers to White's Cat. of 1789 for this work.

¹⁰ Notes and Queries 1st Series VII. 15. Mr. Babington's note is dated Jan. 1, 1853.

¹¹ This Wyllyam Hayward is doubtless the same as the author of the "Bellum Grammaticale. A discourse . . . betwene . . . the noune and the verbe . . . Turned into English by W. H(ayward)." H. Bynne-man. (London 1569). See the Catalogue of Books in the Brit. Mus. under Andreas Guarina.

In my copy, the last seven of these are torn through their middle vertically." Mr. Babington searched for this tract without success in the British Museum, Bodleian, Cambridge University, Lambeth, and in several of the college libraries. Possibly it is a copy of No. I. above. The phrase "compiled in our old Englyssh Tong," in the description of No. I., suggests that its source may have been in a foreign language; and The General Pardon is definitely stated to be a translation from the French.

It is to be noted that in No. I., if we may judge from the title, the pardon and the deed of gift seem to be combined. We find the combination also in one text of the Short Charter—ms. Ash. 189—where seven lines referring to a pardon are annexed to the Deed.¹² No. II., though said to be drawn up in imitation of the Roman Catholic Pardons, contains "many large priuileges, Grauntes," etc.; these "Grauntes" may have included a grant of Heaven within the Pardon. Having but one text of the Pardon type accessible, it is not possible to determine the relation that it bears to the Charter of Christ. It seems probable, however, from such evidence as we have, that the Pardon was merely a later outgrowth of the Charter.

§ 3. MANUSCRIPTS OF THE Short Charter

A. Brit. Mus. ms. Sloane 3292, Art. 3, fol. 2.¹³ The title of the poem is Magna Carta de Libertatibus Mundi. The date of the manuscript is given as the sixteenth century by the cataloguer.¹⁴ It contains but three other articles:—

¹² See p. 15.

¹⁴ Index to the Sloane MSS. in the Brit. Mus. (1904) 430. Here the Charter is incorrectly cited as Latin poetry instead of English. Cf. also Ayscough's Cat., issued in 1782.

(1) Medical Receipts (or Prescriptions), anonymous; (2) Paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer; and (4) Receipts for dyeing silk, making colours and inks. In regard to the date of the Charter, this manuscript furnishes some interesting information. Written in the two spaces at each side of a large roundish seal, drawn at the base of the Charter as though appended to it, and inscribed with a wounded heart marked with five drops of blood, is the following note: "Mr. Lambert a Justice of Peace in Kent¹⁵ found this on a graue-stone in an Abby in Kent bearing date A° Dni 1400 a copie whereof was geuen to Mr. Humfry Windham of Winsecombe in the county of Somerset. Uppon the other si[de o]f the seale there was should be a P[e]l[ican] [picki]ng her bloo[d] for. . . ." If this statement is true—and I can see no reason to doubt it—the Charter belongs to the fourteenth century. The words "Uppon the other si[de o]f the seale," etc., I am inclined to interpret as meaning that a pelican (for the reading pelican cf. account of ms. Stowe 620 below) was actually carved upon the stone beside the seal;¹⁶ but that the person who copied from the stone did not care to reproduce the picture upon his own Charter. The letters R & B [or D] are written in pencil above the strap of the seal.

The couplets of the Charter are arranged in groups, each containing one or two Latin rubrics. The scribe of this text, whether "Mr. Lambert" or another, has inverted the order of the two last groups, that introduced by Hij's Testibus coming at the end instead of the group containing the date.

B. Brit. Mus. ms. Stowe 620, fol. 11^b. Title, Magna Carta de libertatibus mundi. The manuscript is a folio of paper, with thirty-eight leaves, of the late sixteenth century. It contains "Kentish pedigrees, evidences, heraldic and genealogical notes taken in Churches and private houses, etc., collected in or about the years 1592-1594," together with other items chiefly relating to legal affairs. Among early documents copied in Stowe 620 are: (1) "Memoranda of the committal of [John] Foxley, Baron of the Exchequer, on a charge of improper conduct at the assizes at Winchester, 3 Edw. II. [1309-10] . . .;" and (2) "Extracts from the Collectors' accompts of an aid in Kent on the knighting of the Black Prince, 20 Edw. III. [1346]." ¹⁷ At the middle of the lower edge of the Charter is represented a pointed seal which bears the legend: De Charta redemptionis humane Sigillum salvatoris domini nostri Iesu Xp̄i. Upon the seal also is a heart with the spear-thrust and five drops of blood. To the left of the strap attaching the seal to the Charter, and after the last words of the Charter itself, occurs the following: Cor charte appensum rosei vice cerne sigilli; which continues on the other side, spretā morte tui solus id egit amor. To the left of the seal itself, and therefore not forming part of the Charter, are the words: Matris ut hec proprio stirps est sacrata cruore Pascis item proprio Xp̄i cruore tue; something seems to be missing to complete the sentence. At the right of the Charter are some English words: "ther under nethe in the corner is the olde pointed seale within this charter was sett downe was a pellicane a pickinge Her brest and with bloode flowinge Her yonge one in the nest with the verses about her." Then under all this are the Latin verses:

*Ut pellicanus fit patris sanguine sanus
Sic nos salvati sumus omnes sanguine nati*

The words "ther under nethe in the corner is the olde pointed seale," seem to mean that in the original the seal was attached to one corner of the Charter instead of depending from the centre of the lower margin, as it is represented in the Stowe ms. It will be noted that the original contained a pelican (and here the word is plain, furnishing me with the clue for the reading in Sloane 3292) within the Charter itself, if we are to take the literal meaning of the words.

C. Brit. Mus. Add. Charter 5960. "Charta [Jesu Christi] de libertatibus Mundi, written in English verse, in imitation of a charter, about the year 1500."¹⁸ Upon application to Sir George Warner of the Department of Manuscripts, I was informed that Add. Ch. 5960 belongs to the end of the sixteenth century. It contains the legend: Cor charte appensum rosei vice cerne sigilli sprete morte, tui solus id egit amor, in common with ms. Stowe 620, and bears two lists of formal signatures. The first is headed: "Sealed & delivered in ye presence of" . . . after which follow the names of the three Marys, St. John, and the centurion Longinus. The second reads:

Ita fidem facimus	{	Matthew Marke Luke Iohn	}	Notary Publici
--------------------------	---	----------------------------------	---	-----------------------

Upon the strap of the seal (which does not itself appear in my rotograph) are the letters "CHS IHS," and below,

D. Brit. Mus. ms. Harl. 6848, Art. 36, fol. 221. The Harleian catalogue describes the manuscript as follows: "A Folio, containing Papers chiefly relating to Ecclesiastical Affairs. A great part of them bought of Mr. Baker by Mr. H. Wanley." Art. 36 is said to be "a paper in old English Verse, entitled Magna Charta de libertatibus Mundi. In form of Letters patent from our Saviour."²⁰ The date of the manuscript was given me as the eighteenth century by Sir George Warner. This text, written as prose, is almost exactly the same as that in Add. Ch. 5960, except for spelling, and there is good reason to believe that it is a copy of the other; see p. lxxv. It contains the same list of witnesses, etc., and the sentence beginning cor charte, but lacks the words on the strap of the seal: factum est cor meum etc. This strap is represented by two strokes down from the body of the document, and no seal is drawn at the end. The letters "CHS IHS" of Add. Charter are "CHS CHS" in Harl. 6848.

E. Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 37049, Art. 16, fol. 23^v. The manuscript contains: "The Desert of Religion and other poems and religious pieces, etc., mostly illustrated, in Northern English Paper (except ff. 1, 2); ff. 1 + 96. First half of the XV. cent. The colored drawings are in the crudest style. On f. 1 is an old number 94. 10¾ in. x 8 in."²¹ The title given to the poem in the catalogue, which does not, however, appear in the Charter itself, is, The Charter of Human Redemption. It is written as prose. The Deed is represented as inscribed upon an immense sheet, held in the two hands of Christ on the Cross. The drawing of the body of Christ is very crude. He is covered with the marks of wounds, and His hands and feet are pierced with nails; He wears a curious sort of turban and a halo surrounds His head. The spear wound is also to be seen, dropping blood. Instruments of the Passion (scourges, spear, hammer, the pillar, wrapped with the cords and stained with blood, the sponge on a pole, and, of course, the Cross itself) are all to be seen, not in the Deed but upon the folio containing it. At the bottom of the sheet are representations of grinning skulls, and bones. To the middle of the lower edge of the Charter is attached a pointed seal, drawn as though fastened by thongs in the usual fashion, and in the centre of the seal is the heart with the spear thrust and the five drops of blood. The sacred monogram "IHS" appears on the seal.

¹⁹ Incorrect reference. It should be either Psal. 21. 15 (Vulgate), or Psal. 22. 14 (Eng. Versions). We should expect the Vulgate numeration, since the verse is quoted in Latin. It looks as though the scribe, after copying the verse, added the reference from an English Bible.

²⁰ Cat. of Harl. mss. III. (1808) 435. The title cited by the catalogue does not appear in my rotograph of this Charter.

F. Brit. Mus. ms. Harl. 116, Art. 2, fol. 97^b. Title, Carta Redempcionis Humane. "A Parchment Book, written by different Hands, in a small fol." "[The Charter] is a short Poem, feigned to be Spoken by our Savior, and composed in the Form of a Deed of Feoffment. In the Index of Contents at the Beginning of the Book, it is called Magna Carta Salvatoris." ²² The Catalogue gives no indication as to where the hands change. The date assigned to Article 2 by Sir George Warner is the second half of the fifteenth century. This copy of the Charter contains no seal and no Latin sentences.

G. Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 24343, Art. 2, ff. 6^b-7^a, written in single columns. The title (given at the end of the Charter) is Carta Redempcionis humane. The text is "in English verse, framed in imitation of a grant of land; [The manuscript is] vellum; XVth cent. Small Quarto."²³ There is no seal attached to this Charter. At the top of fol. 6^b are the letters "I H C," and at the bottom of fol. 7^a are the words: "Min harte life and dere," written in a different and more modern hand. From the rotograph in my possession, I should judge the manuscript to be much stained, and fol. 6^b gives the appearance of having had a portion of another piece erased upon it, or faded, over which the Charter was written. The lines of the Charter are inscribed between the very faint lines of the erased article. It is impossible to determine what this may have been. The only other article in the manuscript is No. 1, which the catalogue describes as follows: "Les cink ioyes de nostre Dame; in French verse; preceded by, and interspersed with, prayers in Latin and French."

²² Cat. of Harl. mss. I. (1808) 35.

H. Caius Coll. Camb. ms. 230, Art. 21, fol. 25^b, written in double columns. Title (given in the Colophon), Carta Humane redempcion the rest is cut off by the edge of the page. The manuscript is vellum, of the fifteenth century, and came "from St. Alban's Abbey, as appears by many of the verses contained in the volume. It is closely connected with Abbot John Whethamstede."²⁴ The Charter has no seal or illustrations.

I. Bod. ms. Ashmole 61, Art. 28, fol. 106, occupying but little more than one-half of one of the double columns in which the manuscript is written. The title heading the poem is Testamentum domini. The manuscript is thus described: "A very tall and narrow folio volume, consisting of 161 leaves of paper of the largest size folded down the length of the sheet. On a flyleaf at the beginning is fixed a torn leaf containing a spoiled copy of 30 lines of the first article, and part of a list of the contents of the volume, which are: A collection of Metrical Romances, Lays, and other Poems in Old English, made by one Rate, in or before the time of Henry VII."²⁵ At the end of the Charter is drawn a shield, described thus in the catalogue: "a shield charged with a cross between 4 suns, and in the centre a heart with a sun in it." The four suns and the sun within the heart seem to be intended to represent the five wounds of Christ, that in the heart being the one made by the spear. What appears in the drawing to be rays may be blood marks.

J. Brit. Mus. ms. Harl. 237, Art. 19, fol. 100-100^b: Carta Humane Redempcionis, written in double columns. The manuscript is described as a "Codex Chartaceus et male-habitus in 4to."²⁶ The date of this text (art. 19), as furnished me by Sir George Warner, is the late fifteenth century. The Charter is crowded in between art. 18, De Ordinatione, and art. 20, Formula injungendi populo preces, in Ecclesia Parochiali. The text begins with line 7, immediately following the title, Carta humane redempcionis, and proceeds in this order: 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, 21, 23, 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 1, 2, 3, 4, [5 and 6 lacking], 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34. It will be evident that the mistake is due to the scribe's having copied his lines in the wrong order from a text arranged in double columns, something like this:

The scribe of the original manuscript, having some space left to the right, began his article there; but he had first written his title at the end of the preceding piece, as was customary, before he thought of saving the blank space to the right. The scribe of Harl. 237, seeing the title just above what is in reality line 7, supposed that to be the beginning of the Charter and proceeded to copy from that point down the left column and then down the right. As he had presumably just finished a Latin prose treatise, and would not be looking for rhyme, and as the first few lines he copied of this text made sense, he continued without noticing that after line 17 he was writing nonsense. The Charter has the colophon, quod I lang. Whether this is the name of the supposed author or of the scribe I cannot say. The preceding article is subscribed as nearly as I can make out, H. Goffridus de tempore ord.

K. Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 5465 (ms. Fairfax), Art. 50, ff. 119^v-124.^v This manuscript is described in detail by B.

Fehr, in Herrig's Archiv cvi. 48-70, and the songs it contains, of which the Charter is one, are printed with the description, exclusive of the musical notation which accompanies them. "Robert Ffayrfax" was, according to Fehr, a celebrated musician and composer who received in 1504 the degree of Mus. D. from Cambridge, in 1511 the same degree from Oxford, and died in 1529. Fehr believes it possible that the manuscript was written by Fairfax's own hand, as we know from entries in the "State's Papers" that he increased his income by writing music books. "Soviel ist sicher," says Fehr, "dass die Handschrift Fairfax' Besitz war: sein Wappen ist auf dem Titelblatt gezeichnet, und auf S. 40 in die beiden Anfangsbuchstaben M hineingeflochten. Wie das Titelblatt weiter andeutet, gehörte das Liederbuch im Jahre 1618 dem General Fairfax, von dem es später in die Hände des Ralph Thoresby von Leeds überging;" etc.

L. Bod. ms. Ashmole 189, fol. 109, written in single column, about twenty-five lines to the page. In this manuscript, as in ms. Fairfax, the Charter figures as a song. It is the tenth in " 'A collection of Hymns and religious ditties' in Old English," which is the sixth article (apparently) in the second of the four manuscripts that are bound in Ash. 189. Black's account²⁷ of this second manuscript is as follows: "The second ms. consists of 40 leaves (ff. 70-109), rudely written, on lines ruled with red ink, in the XVth century. On the upper corner of the second page is a distich, written in a cypher of Arabic numerals for the vowels; which may be read thus:

'Qui scripsit certe Ricardus nominatur aperte
Quod si queratur recte Wrazall cognominatur.'

On the middle of the last page but one is the following inscription: 'Dominus Ricardus Coscumbe prior de Muchelney est possessor huius libri.' This being in the same handwriting as the other note (though without cypher) shows a probability that both names mean the same person. The handwriting of the book is very different." Under the entry of the Charter occurs the following note: "This is a version of what was called Carta Christi or Testamentum Domini: it is longer than the copy in No. 61, art. 28: and pretends to grant an indulgence of 26030 years and 11 days." The refrain is: "Wette ye All that bene here," the first line of the Charter.

M. St. John's Coll. Camb. ms. B. 15, fol. 53. The manuscript is described by Dr. M. R. James (Descriptive Catal. of the MSS. in the Lib. of St. John's Coll. Camb., 1913) as: "Vellum and paper . . . several volumes. Cent. xv and xiv. Ex dono Magistri gent ecclesiae Barbrooke in Essezia Rectoris." Under I, presumably designating the first volume of the set, is entered Carta redemptoris, beginning: "Weyteth now alle that ben here," etc. From the fact that no date is assigned to this volume, and that Vol. III is definitely assigned to the fourteenth century, I infer that Vol. I is written in a fifteenth century hand. Dr. James refers to this Charter as "printed by Furnivall, E. E. T. S.," but so far as I am aware neither Furnivall nor the E. E. T. S. has printed the Short Charter.

§ 4. MANUSCRIPTS OF THE Long Charter

A-Text²⁸

F. Bod. ms. Rawl. poet. 175, Art. 7, ff. 94^b-95^b; in columns of about forty-two lines each. Mr. Madan's account of the manuscript is as follows: "in English, on parchment: written in the middle of the fourteenth century: $11\frac{1}{8} \times 8$ in., 1 + 136 leaves, in double columns. Old English religious and moral poems. . . . Owned in 1630 by 'Christopher Fauell': perhaps earlier by 'Raphe Warmoud.' The manuscript came to Rawlinson from the Thoresby collection."²⁹ The Charter has no title, but just above the first line it bears the legend, Ihesus est amor meus.

²⁸ The symbols F, G, H, etc., of these mss., as well as A, B, C, etc., used of the mss. of Version B and of the Short Charter, have no significance as regards priority or rank of the mss., but were applied arbitrarily when the writer first began work upon them. Later, the difficulties involved in altering the symbols to an order more consistent with the results attained, made it seem unwise to change them.

G. Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 11307, Art. 2, ff. 89-97, written in single columns, each containing about twenty-six or twenty-eight lines. This manuscript is described in the catalogue as a vellum octavo of the XVth century.³⁰ Sir George Warner assigns it to the first half of the century. The Charter is without title, and is accompanied by a recent transcript, which is unsigned. Four recent transcripts of other articles contained in this manuscript were made by Joseph Haslewood, but the catalogue does not say that he is the author of the transcript of the Charter.

H. Brit. Mus. ms. Harl. 2346, Art. 16, ff. 51-55, in single columns, of about twenty-eight lines each. The manuscript is a small quarto, written upon parchment, and composed chiefly of theological tracts. Article 16 is "An old English Poem upon the Love of our blessed Savior to Mankind, & his Sufferings for us: wherein, by a Prosopopoeia, he is made to be the Speaker."³¹ Sir George Warner informs me that the article was written in the first half of the fifteenth century.

I. Brit. Mus. ms. Harl. 5396, part of Art. 4, ff. 301-305^b. written in single columns, varying from twenty-two to twenty-six lines in length. Under Art. 4, which the cataloguer describes as "A very curious Book on paper," is an inscription in a modern hand, running thus: "A collection of ancient Poems, with some other memorandums, dated the 34th year of K. Hen. VI. 1456." ³² The same hand gives a summary of the chief contents. Sir George Warner's date for this Charter is late fifteenth century. The title heading the Charter is, What Chryst hath done for us. Opposite line 32 is some writing, unintelligible to me, which appears to form two or three words. Again, at the end of the Charter, on page 305^b, are two or three words illegible (at least to me), after which Explicite is written in a hand different from that of the poem.

J. Bod. ms. Add. C. 280 (Summary Cat. No. 29572), Art. 4a, ff. 124-5, written in double columns, with about forty lines in each. The manuscript is "on parchment: written in the first half of the fifteenth cent. in England (?): 10½ x 7½ in., 127 leaves: binding, stamped brown leather, early 17th cent. English work." The chief contents of the manuscript is the French text of the Travels of Sir John Mandeville. "Fols. 124-127 contain two English poems, added about the middle of the 15th cent.: (1) Carta domini Nostri Ihesu Cristi in 212 lines: (2) on the life of Christ, beg.: 'Alle ȝe mowyn be blythe & glade,' in 358 lines." ³³ The title quoted just above is given in the colophon. On fol. 127^b occurs the following mark of ownership: Iste liber constat Johanni Heruy de Lyncolnes Inn; and just below, signa dede. The catalogue notes that Hervy was admitted to Lincoln's Inn in 1509.

K. Bod. ms. 89 (Sum. Cat. no. 1886), ff. 45-49, Art. 2, in single columns of about twenty-eight lines each. The poem is headed: Hic incipit Carta Xpi. On folio 49, at the bottom of the page and, I should judge, in the scribe's own hand, are the words: Iste liber constat Domine Thome Seybrygge. Just at the end of the Charter is the following in a different hand: Deux pere sapite nous donn pais & plente-ocus & sancte abstinence et charite bon vie & bon & fyn et vitam eternam amen. At the top of fol. 49 a mark of ownership with the date 1431 is written in a third hand, as follows: In bigit-siem Margarete lān miiijxxxj Harwod. Bodley's librarian informs me that both the Charter and the only other article contained in Bod. 89 (Speculum Christiani, ff. 1-44, in a different hand from the Charter) were written about the year 1400.

L. Magd. Coll. Oxf. ms. St. Peter-in-the-East 18 e. This Charter is a fragment which is written on the back of a secular charter document preserved in the muniment room of Magdalen College, Oxford. The following description of the manuscript and fragment was most kindly furnished me by the Rev. H. A. Wilson, Librarian of Magdalen College, Oxford: "The parchment on which the fragment is written measures about ten inches by five. It contains on the one side a document numbered '18 e' belonging to the series of charters and deeds relating to the parish of St. Peter in the East in Oxford preserved in the muniment room of Magdalen College. The document is a record of a presentment made in the King's Court in Oxford, on the part of the Master and brethren of the Hospital of St. John Baptist, on the Monday after the Exaltation of the Cross, in the 13th year of Henry IV. (i. e. on Sept. 19th, 1412), for the abatement of a nuisance caused to them by the Proctors of the University having made a new window in a hall called Blakehall (Black Hall), in the parish of St. Peter in the East, opening on the land of a tenement belonging to the Master and Brethren. The fragment is written across the back of the document [in long double lines] in a small neat hand of the 15th century, probably of a date nearly the same with that of the document. It begins about an inch from one end of the parchment and about three inches remain blank at the other end after the last line."

V. Bod. ms. Vernon, ff. 317^b-318^a,³⁴ of the latter part of the fourteenth century. The title of the Charter is Testamentum Christi. It has been printed twice: by Horstmann in Herrig's Archiv, and by Dr. Furnivall in the Publications of the Early English Text Society, as has been already noted.³⁵

HISTORY AND SOURCES

§ 1. THE CHARTER AS A LITERARY TYPE

It would be natural, perhaps, to suppose that a form which lends itself so readily to imitation as the legal grant or deed of gift, would have been seized upon eagerly by mediæval writers, whose fondness for allegory would presumably have led them to see in the Charter, as in the Last Will and Testament, a convenient medium of symbolic expression.

This, however, does not appear to have been the case. Examples of the type represented by the Charter of Christ, in which the legal form is made to subserve a literary purpose, are exceedingly rare both in England and on the Continent. Indeed, I know of but one example originating in France—Rutebeuf's version of the deed granted to the devil by Theophilus;¹ even this, however, is not a true illustration of the type, since it contains no allegorical element but purports to be an actual charter drawn by Theophilus. It is noteworthy that in the Middle English versions of this legend the deed itself does not appear until the latter part of the fifteenth century.²

The Devil's Charter by Barnabe Barnes, a play acted probably for the first time in 1607, contains a Charter between the Devil and Pope Alexander VI. (ed. R. B. McKerrow, 1904, in Materialien zur Kunde des älteren Englischen Dramas VI.).

In considering examples of the charter type in Middle English we may also leave out of account the spurious grants of land purporting to be executed by Athelstan, Edward the Confessor, etc., since these too are not allegorical, but actual, deeds.³ Aside from the Charters of Christ I know of only two instances of the allegorical charter in Middle English: the "Charter of Favel to Falsehood," in Piers Plowman,⁴ and the Charter of the Abbey of the Holy Ghost.⁵

The "Charter of Favel to Falsehood," including the description of its witnesses, sealing, etc., occupies in the A-text but twenty-two lines. Like certain versions of the Charter of Christ, it follows fairly closely the phraseology of a legal instrument:—

Hit witen and witnessen	that woneth vppon eorthe,
That I Fauuel, feffe Fals	to that mayden Meede.

Then follows a list of their holdings, the "erldam of envye," etc., "to habben and to holden and al heore heyres aftur," on condition that they yield their souls to Satan at the year's end. After the list of witnesses, "Wrong, Pers the pardoner," etc., the deed is sealed "in the date of the deuel, be siht of sir Symoni and notaries signes." In the B- and C-texts, the Charter is introduced by the words Sciant presentes et futuri, etc., also found in the Charter of Christ. The C-text drops the formula "to have and to hold," and ³These have been printed from time to time in Notes and Queries; see for example a grant of King Athelstan, 6th Ser. XII. 194. A correspondence concerning the age and authenticity of these documents extends through several numbers of the N. and Q., references for which may be obtained from the indices.

Another rhymed Charter occurs in MS. Cott. Julius F. X., Art. 29, f. 154, beginning:

Iche Sancti Edwardi Regis
Have yeoven of my forest the keping, etc.

⁴A-text II. 60-82; B-text II. 74-113; C-text III. 79-115.

⁵Printed by Horstmann, Richard Rolle I. 338 ff.

both B- and C-texts spoil the simplicity and clearness of the A version of the deed by introducing amplifications, and by changing from the first person to the third.⁶ Aside from the parallelism in structure, the "Charter of Favel" shows no resemblance to either of the others.

In the Charter of the Abbey of the Holy Ghost, on the other hand, we find a closer parallel to the Charter of Christ. In the first place, the subject—God's ceding to man a "lytel precieuse place that is clepid Conscience"—is not unlike the grant of Heaven to man made by Christ in His Charter. Again, between the Charter of the Abbey and the Short Charter are certain likenesses which, though they may be due to the employment in both of the phraseology of legal instruments, yet possibly indicate some connection between them. In both, the formulae of the legal deed are in Latin, followed by an English translation. One or two of these appear also in the Long Charter, but they do not occur consistently throughout. Again, the witnesses named in the Abbey Charter—"aungel and man, heuene and erthe, sone and mone and al the sterres"—suggest the list of phenomena cited as witnesses of the Deed in the Short Charter. Finally, the phrase "to the chef lord of the fee" in the Abbey Charter finds a parallel in "as to the chief lord of the fee" in the Short Charter. We need not, however, attach much significance to this point, since the phrase is evidently a translation of a Latin formula, such as is found, for example, in a charter of the fiftieth year of Henry III: habenda et tenenda eidem Rogero et heredibus suis de capitalibus dominis feodi illius seu nobis vel aliis imperpetuum.⁷

Should there be any connection between the Charter of the Abbey and the Short Charter, it may fairly be assumed that the dependence was on the side of the former, even though we cannot prove the Short Charter to be earlier than the year 1400.⁸

§ 2. ANTIQUITY OF THE CHARTER OF CHRIST

1. The Charter of Christ probably existed in Middle English verse as early as the first quarter of the fourteenth century. The oldest extant manuscript of the Long Charter—Rawl. poet. 175—was written about 1350; but between the Rawlinson ms. and the archetype, as I shall undertake to show in Chapter V, no less than three manuscripts intervened, so that the archetype may reasonably be assigned to the early decades of the century.⁹ To the fourteenth century belongs also the Latin metrical Carta Libera, as we are as-

⁸ Horstmann (Nachträge zu den Legenden Herrig's Archiv. LXXIX. 470) thought that a close relation existed between the Long Charter, Versions A and B (he calls it Testamentum Christi) and the Cursor Mundi Pt. II. (E. E. T. S.) 978 ff. But the likeness here seems to me no greater than exists between the Charter and other poems on the Passion. He later (1895, Rich. Rolle. i. 71) suggests a Complaint in ms. Camb. Univ. Dd. 5. 64, beginning: "Vnkynde man, gif kepe til me and loke what payne I suffer for þe," as furnishing the theme for the Long Charter in ms. Vernon. One line in this poem, "With hungryr, thirst, hete & calde," suggests line 48 of the Long Charter, "In hongur and þurst, colde and wo"; but the details in the Complaint find so many parallels in other pieces that it would hardly be safe to stress such a resemblance. Cf. for the source of the theme of this poem and others similar to it, note 12, pp. xf., and compare Thien's opinion, Ueber die Eng. Marienklagen 82.

Förster (Herrig's Archiv cx. 358) suggests that the texts of the Short Charter in Ash. 61 and 189 may belong to the class known as "Himmelsbriefe." So far as I can see there appears to be no relation between the "Letters from Heaven" and the Charter of Christ. For these Letters, Förster refers to A. S. Napier, Contributions to Old Eng. Lit. i. (An Old English Homily on the Observance of Sunday), and R. Priebisch, John Audelay's Poem on the Observance of Sunday, both in the Furnivall Miscellany 355 ff. and 397 ff., as also to a number of other articles.

sured by the date of the earlier of the two manuscripts in which it is preserved. The other extant versions of the Charter of Christ contribute no evidence that would point to an earlier origin for the type. None of the manuscripts of the Short Charter is earlier than the fifteenth century. The fact that ms. A is copied from a gravestone bearing the date 1400, makes it clear that this version was in existence before the close of the fourteenth century, but linguistic tests, so far as they go, suggest a date late in the century.¹⁰ The Kent Charter is written on the back of a legal conveyance dated 1395, but we have no means of determining when the poem was added. Linguistic tests show, however, that at the time of its composition final e was not pronounced.¹¹ Carta Domini is preserved in a manuscript of the fifteenth century.¹²

§ 3. THE ORIGIN OF THE CHARTER OF CHRIST

The idea of a charter, drawn up in imitation of a legal document, according to which the Saviour grants to mankind title to the Kingdom of Heaven, may possibly have arisen merely as a variation upon the theme of Christ's Last Will and Testament, a literary type to which reference has already been made.¹ Christ's Last Will is occasionally mentioned in mediæval works, which describe the Lord as bequeathing upon the Cross various legacies to those He was leaving on earth.² Though quite distinct in the legal form upon which it is based, the Charter resembled the Will in being the Saviour's dying gift; thus it will be noted that all the Deeds are dated on the day of the Crucifixion.

Again, a suggestion for the Charter may be found in a passage in the Epistle to the Hebrews (ix: 15-18):

Et ideo novi testamenti mediator est; ut morte intercedente, in redemptionem earum prævaricationum, quæ erant sub priori testamento, repromissionem accipiant qui vocati sunt æternæ hereditatis. Ubi enim testamentum est: mors necesse est intercedat testatoris. Testamentum enim in mortuis confirmatum est: alioquin nondum valet, dum vivit qui testatus est. Unde nec primum quidem sine sanguine dedicatum est.

The Greek διαθήκη, here rendered by testamentum, combines the meaning of "covenant" and "testament"³ so that the lines just quoted embody a two-fold figure: (1) the Last Will and Testament made by Christ on man's behalf; (2) the new Covenant instituted by Christ through His

² See, for example, St. Ambrose, Comment. Lib. x in Euang. Luc. Cap. xxiii:

Sed ibi pro loco, hic & in cruce non immemor matris, appellat eam, dicens: ecce filius tuus. Et Ioanni: ecce mater tua. Testabatur de cruce Christus, & Testamentum eius signabat Ioannes; dignus tanto testatore testis. Bonum Testamentum non pecunie; sed vitæ: quod non atramento scribitur; sed Spiritu Dei vivi.

See also Leg. Aur. (Nuremberg 1488) De Passione ihesu Christi fol. lxvi^b; and Abbatus Ernaldus Bonævallis, in a discourse concerning the Seven Words of the Cross, Migne, Pat. Lat. CLXXXIX. Col. 1696, etc., etc.

death on the Cross, whereby man receives the promise of an eternal inheritance.

The word "testamentum" was, of course, familiar to mediæval readers in the sense of "covenant" as well as of "testament." The first interpretation, applied to the passage in question, would represent Christ as the sacrificial victim slain, according to Hebrew custom, to confirm the covenant with mankind.⁴ The second interpretation would identify Christ as the testator who grants a charter to man as his dying bequest. But either interpretation may easily have served to suggest the representation of Christ's grant to mankind under the form of a legal deed or charter.

From this figure of the Redemption as a legal deed—tracing its ultimate source very possibly to these sentences in the Epistle to the Hebrews—the several extant versions of the Charter of Christ presumably derive. But before proceeding to define more closely the nature of the prototype, or to consider the textual relations of the various extant versions, it will be necessary to note the occurrence, in two of them, of a figure which is directly related to the question of origins.

§ 4. THE METAPHOR OF THE CRUCIFIED BODY AS THE CHARTER

In the Long Charter and Kent Charter, but in no other versions, an extended metaphor⁵ identifies the Deed with the crucified Body of Christ. In the Long Charter the Deed is written upon the parchment of the Lord's skin with pens which are the scourges used by the Jews. The letters are His wounds, the sealing-wax His blood, etc. The Indenture, or copy left with man, is the Sacrificial Body of the Lord in the Eucharist. The same figure is expressed also in the Kent Charter:

⁵ The term allegory seems hardly applicable, as the figure is not developed through narrative but by explanation.

I Jhesus of Nazaren . . .
 Have grantyd, þovyn and confermyd is * Thourch my Charte that the mon se
 My body that heng on the tre,
 A mes housyd fayir and fre
 It is hevene blysse I telle the . . . etc.

Other versions of the Charter, it is true, also have some features which at first sight suggest that the metaphor, though not explicit, was yet implied: in the Carta Libera and the Carta Domini the document is said to be written in the Lord's blood, while in the Short Charter the wound in His side is the seal. Since similar points form a part of the metaphor in the Long Charter and Kent Charter, where Christ's blood is either sealing-wax or seal, it would be natural to suppose that the occurrence of such features in the other Charters implied the same metaphor.

This supposition, however, can hardly be justified. In the first place, the expressions proprio sanguine conscripsi, hec —sanguine scripta, and "the wounde in my syde [or "herte"] the sele it is," of the Carta Domini, Carta Libera and the Short Charter respectively, may be otherwise explained. They may have reference to the shedding of blood necessary to the ratification of the covenant discussed in Section 3, the terms conscripsi, scripta, and "sele" being attributable to the fact that in our texts, the covenant is expressed under the figure of a written charter. Again, had the metaphor of Christ's Body been in the minds of the several authors of these three Charters, it would indeed have been strange that they should not have expressed it definitely. The idea is appropriate and too suggestive for them to have neglected it, especially in the case of the author of the Carta Libera, who introduces much detail regarding the sufferings of our Lord at the Crucifixion. Moreover, in the Carta Libera, the words hec mors, homo, fit tua carta are better explicable as referring to the ratification of a covenant than as intending to suggest the metaphor in question.

Accordingly, this metaphor, in my opinion, was not present in the Charter of Christ, as it was originally conceived, but was introduced later as an adornment. It may possibly have grown out of the phrase in the Carta Libera already mentioned: hec mors, homo, fit tua carta, or from hec . . . sanguine scripta,⁷ or from a reference to the wound in Christ's side as a seal in some early text of the Short Charter, etc.⁸

On the other hand, the figure may go back to a Scriptural source. In the Epistle to the Colossians (II: 13-14) St. Paul speaks of a bond or writ as being nailed to the Cross:

Et vos cum mortui essetis in delictis, et præputio carnis vestræ, convivificavit cum illo, donans vobis omnia delicta: delens quod adversus nos erat chirographum decreti, quod erat contrarium nobis, et ipsum tulit de medio, affigens illud cruci:

Though the bond here mentioned is not, of course, the same as that with which we are concerned, yet it is a legal document nailed to the Cross by Christ in effecting man's redemption from sin. That the Middle Ages played upon ⁷ Also in Carta Libera.

⁸ The fact that the Long Charter is an early text (see p. xxxix) and that our only text of Carta Domini, for example, occurs in a 15th cent. MS., does not affect the argument here; for there may have been very early texts both of Carta Domini and of the other versions in which the metaphor is not found.

Huiusmodi autem debitum apostolus vocat cirographum quod quidem christus tulit & cruci affixit. De quo cirographo dicit Augustinus. Eua peccatum a diabolo mutuavit. cirographum scripsit. fideiussorem dedit. & vsura posteritati. creuit. Tunc enim a diabolo peccatum mutuauit. quando contra preceptum dei sue prauī iussioni vel suggestioni consensit. cirographum scripsit. quando manum ad pomum vetitum porrexit. fideiussionem dedit. quando Adam peccatorum sentire fecit. & sic vsura peccati posteritati creuit.

The same figure is used by Ludolphus de Saxonia, in his Vita Jesu Christi,¹⁰ as follows:

Quia enim primus homo ad lignum preuaricationis manus extendendo & pedibus accedendo cyrographum damnationis nostre diabolo confecerat : ideo saluator noster : vt cyrographum illud deleret manibus et pedibus ligno salutifere crucis affigi voluit clauis inuictissime charitatis delens per hac cyrographum decreti quod erat contrarium nobis : et ipsum tulit de medio affigens illud cruci Jesu qui durissimis clauis cruci affigi voluisti : ac per hoc cyrographum peccatorum nostrorum & mortis eidem cruci affixisti. Confige quaeso timore tuo carnes meas etc.

From this it would be but a step to connect the chirographum with the Body of the Saviour and incorporate the metaphor into the Charter of Christ, a document already purporting to deed to man the inheritance of Heaven.¹¹

¹¹ In this connection, it should be noted that in the Short Charter ms. A, the following six lines standing at the beginning just before the Soiant presentes et futuri (which is supposedly the beginning of the Charter) speak of a writ of man's debt cancelled by Christ:

Jhesus Christ his Charter Great
That bloud and water so did sweat

Though the Pauline text be recognized as furnishing the original suggestion for the figure, it was not necessarily the source upon which these Charters directly depended, for the same metaphorical representation of the Body of Christ, in both simple and elaborated forms, occurs in various treatises at least as early as the fourteenth century and very possibly even earlier. Notwithstanding variations of detail such as might be expected in the development of the Pauline figure—for example, the document is sometimes represented as a book or a bill of pardon as well as a charter—yet the parchment is always Christ's Body. Perhaps the simplest expression of the figure is to be found in the two following citations, wherein, it will be noted, no actual document is mentioned:

oure blessed fadir of heuene spared not his owen sone but suffrede hym to be streyned on the harde cros, moore dispitoualy & greuously þan euer was schepys skyn streyned on the wal or vp-on þe parchemyn-makeris harowe aȝens þe sonne to drye.¹²

And had his heart I-wounded sore
To save mankind forever more Christ hath cancelled the writ of man's debt
And by the great Charter him free hath set.

This allusion to a writ would have led me to include the above passage from Colossians among the possible sources of the Charter, discussed in the preceding section, except that it is not probable that these lines formed a part of the original text of the Short Charter. They do not occur in ms. E, of the early 15th cent., nor in any other ms. except that the last two are found in ms. B, of the late 16th cent. Metrically, these lines appear to be of late origin. Moreover, the metre in the last two differs from that of the Charter itself. So that, although ms. Sloane 3292 (ms. A) purports to contain a version copied from a gravestone in 1400, and hence probably represents a fairly early text of the Short Charter, yet as the ms. itself belongs to the 16th cent., these introductory lines may well have been added, or rather, prefixed, to the Charter when the ms. was written.

¹² A meditation of þe fyue woundes of Ihesu Crist, printed by Horstmann, Richard Rolle II. 440, from Univ. Coll. Oxford ms. 97, of the end of the 14th century. The Meditacion has been wrongly attributed

And whene he [Christ] was thus sprede o-brode one þe crosse more straite þan any parchemyne-skyne es sprede one þe harowe, so þat mene myghte tell all þe blyssede bones of his body.¹³

With the exception of these two, all the examples I have noted speak of a document, or book. In An ABC Poem on the Passion of Christ, one finds in the introductory stanzas a comparison between Christ's Body on the Cross and the horn book, or ABC, from which children learned to read: ¹⁴

- 1 In place as man may se, to Richard Rolle. It also occurs in ms. Simeon (Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 22283) at fol. 61^b, which was transcribed about 1380-1400; see Horstmann, op. cit. 436, and the Cat. of Add. mss. in the Brit. Mus.

¹³ Bonaventura de mysteriis passionis Iesu Christi, or The Privity of the Passion, meditation for midday; printed by Horstmann, Richard Rolle i. 206, from ms. Thornton (c. 1430-40). This is an anonymous work, a "free and abridged translation" of the Meditationes Vitæ Christi, Cap. 74-92, formerly ascribed to Bonaventura. The Latin treatise does not contain the figure of the parchment, which is thus an addition by the author of the so-called translation.

¹⁴ Ms. Harl. 3954, which is dated by Furnivall about 1420. The poem itself may be somewhat earlier. It has been printed in the Reliq. Antiq., and in Pol. Rel. and Love Poems (ed. Furnivall E. E. T. S.) 271.

Finally, the metaphor in elaborated form is to be found in the Carta Celestis Hereditatis, one of a series of fourteenth century tracts of uncertain authorship entitled collectively The Poor Caitiff. The parts of this text which concern

¹⁷ Another mention of the Pardon Charter is found in Chaucer's ABC Poem:

He vouched sauf, tel him, as was his wille,
Bicome a man, to have our alliaunce,
And with his precious blood he wroot the bille,
Up-on the crois, as general acquitaunce,
To every penitent in ful creaunce;

This allusion does not occur in his source.

Christ's grant of Heaven to man are printed in Appendix II. of the present study. An examination of the Carta will show that it not only contains the features of the figure which appear in the Disputacion, etc., but adds also the following (1) the wounds numbered 5475; (2) the pens that wrote the Charter were the nails, spear, and thorns of the crucifixion; (3) the print of the seal was the shape of our Lord upon the Cross; (4) the sentence of the Charter is our belief, and (5) the laces of the Charter are forgiveness of sin and trust in God.¹⁸

It will be observed that certain of these pieces present striking points of resemblance with the Charters. One of these consists in the identification of Christ's wounds with letters, with which compare the following lines of the Long Charter:

How many lettres thereon ben Red and þou may wite and sen ffif þousand fourē hundred fyfti and ten Woundes on me boþe red and wen.

There is also an interesting parallel between the Carta Celestis Hereditatis, and the Long Charter in that both mention pens and a specific number of wounds. The pens in the Carta however, are nails, spear, and thorns, while those in the Long Charter are scourges. The number of the wounds in one is 5475 and in the other 5460; but this is not as significant as at first appears, for these numbers,

¹⁸ Two other (15th cent.) references are as follows:

- 1) His herte blod wrot oure hele,
 And Ihesus body þe parchemyn is;
 Wiþ trewe loue he prented oure sele,
 Pat is heritage of oure blis.

J. Kail, Twenty-six Pol. and Other Poems

- 2) The passage from the Digby passion play, already quoted in another connection at p. x, note 10.

or others almost equally large, are also features in other mediæval descriptions of the wounded Body of Christ.¹⁹

Consequently, it is entirely possible that the Long Charter and Kent Charter may have drawn the metaphor of Christ's Body from one or more of these or similar pieces. On the other hand, the reverse might have been the case. As to this one can hardly attempt to decide; the dates of the several texts furnish no clue as they are all of the fourteenth century.

§ 5. A COMPARISON OF THE DEED OF GIFT IN THE FIVE CHARTERS

Of the five texts of the Charter of Christ, three consist of the Deed of Gift alone.¹ The other two—Carta Domini and the Long Charter—contain also additional matter enlarging upon themes suggested by the grant, although it is difficult, particularly in the case of the Long Charter, to decide just how much of the poem the author intended to include within the instrument itself.² Since the points of resemblance between the Charters are confined to the Deed itself, we may exclude for the present the discussion of this additional material (except such portions as may serve to explain details in the instrument proper) and may proceed to compare the several Charters with respect to the forms of the Deed contained in them.

² As illustration, observe the occurrence of the words "Consummatum est, this charter is done," v. 187 (A-text), long after the Deed itself (vv. 99-134) is presumably at an end. Again, at line 155 the Jews are mentioned as witnesses of the Crowning of Christ with thorns; later on, at line 169, the formula "Hijs Testibus Matthew and John, Luke," etc., is introduced, but seems to refer not to the witnessing of the Deed, but to the witnessing of the offer of drink to the Lord.

At the outset one perceives that Carta Domini, the only Latin prose Charter, possesses marked characteristics which distinguish it from all the others. In tone it is learned and ecclesiastical,³ showing a fondness for abstract terms as contrasted with the concrete style of the rest. For example, Carta Domini differs from all the others in not citing as witnesses of the Deed concrete incidents of the crucifixion or the names of persons who were present—as John, the Blessed Virgin, or the Evangelists—but reads: Sigillum que mee diuinitatis apposui cum testimonio patris et spiritus. Nam hij tres testimonia dant in celo—an evident adaptation of 1 John v:7: Quoniam tres sunt, qui testimonium dant in cælo: Pater, Verbum, et Spiritus Sanctus. In view of the divergent character of Carta Domini it hardly seems necessary to include it among the other four texts in the tabular comparison which follows, though its omission is not intended to imply that it differs from them in the essential features of the Deed.

Coming now to examine the details of the Deed as it appears in the other four texts of the Charter, we may best indicate their mutual relations by arranging in parallel columns the features which they have in common.⁴

³This Charter gives most evidence of having been written by a theologian. It will be remembered that it occurs in a book of sermons; see p. xiii.

⁴In this table brackets indicate that the matter enclosed has been transferred from the order of its occurrence in the Charter.

An examination of this table, and of the text of Carta Domini, shows that all the Deeds have in common:

- (a) the legal form of a charter (including formulae clauses, such as Reddendo, Hija Testibus, etc.), which is followed, however, in greater or less detail;
- (b) the grant of Heaven to man (in Carta Domini, the grant is not expressed as such, but is clearly implied by the whole context of the Charter;
- (c) the day of the crucifixion as the date of sealing or bestowal of the Deed.

It is probable, therefore, that these features belonged to the prototype of the extant texts.

It will be observed further, that Carta Libera, the Long Charter, and the Short Charter, besides particular resemblances of one with another, all contain in the Reddendo clause, the requirement of love or "true love" to God. Accordingly it will be well to note in detail the special relationship of these texts to one another.

First, however, it should be said that Carta Libera, though containing numerous popular features which ally it more closely with the other Deeds, yet is the only text clearly showing points of agreement with Carta Domini, exclusive of those already mentioned as belonging to all the Deeds. These points are: (a) the occurrence, at the end of its long list of witnesses, of the words cum sacro neupmate patre,⁵ which seem to mean that the Father and the Spirit were also witnesses to the Deed; (b) the statement that the Deed was written in Christ's blood.⁶ Thus Carta Libera may perhaps represent a state of transition from one type of Charter to another. Its closest resemblance, however, is to the Short Charter, with which it has in common several points not to be found in the other Deeds:

⁶ In the Long Charter, however, the ink was the blood which flowed from the wounds made by the crown of thorns.

- (a) the phenomena of darkness, earthquake, etc., the Virgin Mary and St. John, as witnesses;
- (b) Christ's own heart attached to the Deed for more security;
- (c) Likenesses between the expression et si que pator videantur non satis arta, post hec en morior, of Carta Libera, and the following lines of the Short Charter:

If anyone should say now
That I have not died for man's prow,
Rather than man should be forlorn,
Yet would I eft be all to torn.

These resemblances might seem sufficiently striking to suggest that the Short Charter was translated directly from Carta Libera,⁷ with such omissions as the author saw fit to make; but to this theory there are two objections. One is that the Short Charter, by connecting the wound in Christ's side or heart with the seal, resembles the Long Charter and Kent Charter; and the other is that we should hardly expect so brief and concise a text as the Short Charter to derive from a source as detailed and complex in portions as Carta Libera. On the whole, therefore, I am inclined to regard the Short Charter as originating from an older and simpler Deed—either the text from which Carta Libera itself derived, or another farther back in the line of its descent.

Let us next examine the Long Charter. This version appears at first sight to be most closely related to Kent Charter by virtue of the fact that these two alone contain the metaphor identifying the Saviour's Crucified Body with the Deed. This resemblance, however, must be regarded with caution. This figure, as has already been shown,⁸ was common in the literature of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries; it may, therefore, have been introduced independently into each charter from one of these extraneous sources. Two other resemblances of the Long Charter with Kent Charter are:

(a) the mention (in 2) of East and West—a slight and probably wholly accidental parallelism.⁹ The context does not justify our assuming relationship from this likeness.

(b) the seal of one and sealing wax of the other identified with Christ's blood flowing from the wound in His heart or side.

It is possible that this last feature, joined to the common possession of the metaphor, may indicate that the Long Charter and Kent Charter were specially related. But on the other hand, the Short Charter also connected the wound in Christ's side with the seal, and it bears no other likeness to Kent Charter. But this resemblance in the three versions may, it seems to me, be accounted for most naturally by supposing either cross influence, or influence from some outside allusion such as those mentioned in Section 4. Early in the fourteenth century we find such expressions as the following, in a poem of Phillipps ms. 8336 (fol. 204^b)¹⁰ by William Herebert, a Franciscan who flourished about 1330:

⁸ See pp. xlvi ff.

¹⁰ Ed. Thos. Wright, Reliq. Antiq. II. 227. Cf. note on Herebert, Ibid. I. 86 ff.

IV

Soethye he my robe tok
 Also ich finde in bok,
 He ys to me y-bounde;
 And helpe he wole, ich wot,
 Vor love the chartre wrot,
 And the enke orn of his wounde.

and it is likely that the feature of the seal varied in its details in other works also.

The Long Charter also resembles Carta Libera and the *Short Charter*¹¹ in recording as witnesses the Virgin and St. John, but adds also the other three Evangelists while lacking the phenomena of darkness, earthquake, etc., which appear in both the other texts. It has, beside, two features in common with Carta Libera alone:

- (a) Christ's promise of mercy to the repentant;
- (b) the description of the place of crucifixion by the adjective "high."

Moreover, in addition to these points of resemblance, there is further evidence that this Deed traces its descent from some text related to Carta Libera,¹² and that is the treatment ¹¹In mss. C and D of the Short Charter, there are two additional points of resemblance with the Long Charter: the legend factum est cor meum tanquam cera liquescens in medio ventris mei, and the four Evangelists—named, however, at the end of the document as Notarii Publici, and not as witnesses, such as they appear to be in the Long Charter. However, as these features do not occur in the earlier mss. of the Short Charter, they are not of much significance in determining its relation to the Long Charter.

Moreover, by its addition of kindness to the rent of love to God in the Reddendo clause, the Long Charter might be regarded as resembling the Short Charter. Since, however, the Short Charter expresses this idea as loving "thy neighbor as I do thee," the likeness between the two Deeds does not appear to be very striking, and is more simply explained as coincidence. Love to God and to one's neighbor would naturally be associated in the mind of any Christian writer.

¹²I do not here include Carta Domini; because, though it, too, as it accords to the matter of the sealing. It contains not one seal but five, the nails and spear of the crucifixion, to wit, Father and Son, God and Man, and the Conception by the Holy Ghost. This, however, is not very clear, and I suspect that we have here an indication that the author of the Long Charter was adapting the Trinity, in an earlier version, to suit his metaphor of Christ's Body and the Deed. For both Carta Domini and Carta Libera contain, in this connection, references to the Trinity. In Carta Domini we seem to have something near the primary form: Sigillumque me divinitatis apposui cum testimonio patris et spiritus. Nam hii tres testimonia dant in celo, etc. In Carta Libera, the corresponding passage runs: pono sigillum, and then, after enumerating other witnesses, aliis multis cum sacro neupmate patre. If now we assume that the words "God and man," in the Long Charter, are in apposition with "Son," we shall have, not five seals (representing the nails in the metaphor) but three: the Father, the Son, and the Conception by the Holy Ghost, corresponding apparently to the Persons of the Trinity, mentioned as seal and witnesses in the other two texts.

One other point remains to be noted in connection with Kent Charter. This text corresponds in some of its witnesses with the list of Christ's sufferings in the Warranty clause of Carta Libera. This again, it appears to me, must be an instance of outside or cross influence. Kent Charter is too unlike any of the other Deeds for us to be able to assert near relationship with them unless we accept its points of resemblance with the Long Charter as proof of such relation. Another stanza of Herebert's poem quoted above, will illustrate the difficulty of attempting to define exact relationships among these texts:

well as Carta Libera, is concerned with the following discussion, it has no other points of resemblance with the Long Charter.

V

Ich take to wytnessinge
 The spere and the crounyng,
 The nailes and the rode,
 That he that ys so cunde,
 Thys ever haveth in munde
 That bouhte ous wyth hys blode.

Here a number of the so-called witnesses are identical with those mentioned both in Kent Charter and in the Warranty clause of Carta Libera, and it is impossible to say which list gave rise to the others, or whether there is not also a fourth to which these may later be traced. In general, we may regard Kent Charter as a fairly late text,¹³ hence as particularly likely to contain material from various sources rather than from one version alone.

In conclusion, it may be said that the foregoing attempt at defining relationships among the Charters is by no means intended to be regarded as establishing facts, but merely as indicating probabilities. The evidence is too meagre, and the possibilities of outside elements contributing to the features of any Charter is too great a factor, to admit of certainty in the results attained.

§ 6. THE ADDITIONAL MATERIAL IN Carta Domini AND THE Long Charter.

Besides the Deed itself, as has previously been stated, Carta Domini and the Long Charter contain additional material developing themes suggested by the instrument. In these additions, however, neither text resembles the other even remotely. This portion of Carta Domini consists of a didactic discourse,¹ for which I know of no source. But for the additional passages in the Long Charter, which are narrative and descriptive in nature, it is evident that the author drew upon the stock material of his time. From the Complaints of Christ he may have borrowed details of the crucifixion scene, though these may quite as well have come from the numerous Passion poems, homilies, etc., of the period. It is impossible to trace the sources of this material, for it was the common fund of the age. One often finds details of this theme expressed in the same words by men who probably never saw each other's work. Such an expression as: "From His foot unto His head, He was nought else but all blood-red," for example, was picked up and handed about from one work to another, until it might almost be said to form part of the mediæval vocabulary, where Christ was the subject. The five wounds, the five red roses, Christ's coat-armour, etc., are subjects that received treatment at many different hands. The figure of the Indenture, however, as the Sacramental Body of Christ, I have been able to find nowhere except in the Long Charter. It may be that this conception belongs to the author of the A-text.

The expansion of the theme which one finds in the B- and C-texts consists likewise of material which was common to the religious literature of the time, though it is, for the most part, more didactic in character than that of the A-text. Examples are, the seven sacraments, the grief of the Virgin, Christ's admonition to man, etc. In one or two cases we can trace the source, as where the C-text incorporates material from the Lamentacio Sancte Marie.² But usually these expansions are so general in character that it is impossible to assign them to any particular source.

² See pp. lxxxix ff.

III

THE INTER-RELATIONS OF MANUSCRIPTS OF THE SHORT CHARTER

The text of the Short Charter comprises, in most of the manuscripts, but thirty-four lines, and the variants, except in a single case, do not offer an opportunity of distinguishing true from spurious readings. It is therefore impossible, with so little available material, to determine the inter-relations of the manuscripts, or to decide which manuscript best represents the text of the original. The following discussion makes no pretense of solving either of these problems; its purpose is merely to present such evidence as exists. This consists: (a) in the external features common to two or more texts; (b) in common readings.

The agreements of the manuscripts in external features may be exhibited in tabular form as follows:

Mss. containing Latin charter formula headings (no. of formulae varying)	A. B. C. D. } contain mention of pelican contain legend Cor charte appensum etc. } Contain seal
	E. -- F. G. } contains picture of Christ on the Cross
Mss. without any Latin formula headings	H. I.¹ J. K. L. M. } Do not contain seal

¹ Ms. I has at the end of its text a shield with a heart inscribed

It is reasonable to suppose that the original of the Short Charter, being written in imitation of a legal document, would have either an actual seal, or a representation of one. Moreover, the seal is found in A, our oldest datable manuscript, as also in E, a manuscript of the early fifteenth century. Hence we may conclude that the seal was an original feature of the Short Charter, and that mss. F, G, H, J, K, L, and M depart from the original text in not retaining it. Now, the seals of A, B, and E are alike in containing the drawing of a wounded heart with five drops of blood.² Since the drawing (or seal) of ms. I is unique in form,³ and is attached at the wrong place after the words, "my own seal thereto I hang," it may have been added by the scribe of this manuscript, and not derived from the manuscript he was copying.

Thus we have two groups: ABCDE, and FGHIJKLM. This group-division is corroborated by the readings in line 14 where FGHIJLM agree in the reading, as I do thee, against BCDE (A unique). K, however, agrees here with BCDE; but this is probably merely a coincidence, since K does not resemble these manuscripts in other particulars, and is a very free version of the text.

The group FGHIJKLM is itself divided into FG and HIJKLM; because a) HIJKLM have none of the Latin formulae, which, since they exist in mss. A and E, and were regular parts of the legal form, were probably in the original upon it. This may have been intended to represent a seal, as it follows the words "my own seal thereto I hang." See discussion below.

³ Whether the drawings called "suns" in the catalogue description of this ms. are really suns, or whether, as I believe, they are intended to represent wounds, does not materially affect the point under discussion, since at any rate the drawing in ms. I differs essentially from that in mss. A, B, and E. See the description of ms. I, pp. xxv f.

of the Short Charter; b) IJKLM agree in al to brake, 24, against ABCDEF, in sonder brake (mss. G and H being unique here, do not affect the grouping); c) FG agree in the readings of 23, 25, 29, and 30; in this last, G appears to be an emendation of the false reading of their common original. The reading of L in 30 is evidently a scribal blunder.

Within the subgroup HIJKLM a special relationship is disclosed between I and J, which agree in line 1 against HKLM. Since no other manuscript of the Short Charter—either within or outside the subgroup—confirms IJ in this line it is certain that the reading of these two mss. is to be regarded as a perversion.

Turning now to ABCDE, we find that mss. A and B agree in containing, at the base of the Charter, an allusion to a pelican, which is not found in C, D, and E. Moreover, A and B have in common two lines, e and f, which do not occur in the other manuscripts. A and B, then, are specially related. Mss. B, C, and D have in common the legend cor charte appensum etc., which does not occur in A probably because it was not reproduced upon the gravestone from which A was copied. E has none of these features. Whether they all belonged originally to the Charter, or to Group ABCDE, it is impossible to say, since none of them is an intrinsic feature of the Charter like the seal, which, as we should expect, is common to all this group.

Ms. D is clearly a copy of ms. C. They read exactly alike, except for very slight differences in spelling and capitalization, and the omission in D of the verse of Scripture which is written on the strap of the seal in C.

The results of the above classification, may be expressed in the following diagram:

MUTUAL RELATIONS OF VERSIONS A, B, AND C, OF THE LONG CHARTER

It is my aim, in this chapter, to show that the A-text represents the oldest extant form of the Long Charter; that the B-text is a redaction made from A, with additions; and that the C-text represents a still later version derived from B.

In the succeeding discussion, the three versions will be referred to as A, B, and C, respectively. It will be necessary to have before us the following tables: the first, giving all the lines of A, with those corresponding in B and C; the second, giving lines which B has in common with C. The numbers in smaller type represent, in the first table, lines in B not occurring in A; in the second table, lines in C not occurring in B.

An examination of these line correspondences brings out at once the following facts:

I. A and B have thirty-five lines in common which are not found in C.

II. B and C have one hundred and seventy-five lines² in common which are not found in A.

III. A and C have no lines in common which are not also found in B.

¹ Both by position and rhyme.

² Because they are peculiar to MS. E alone of the B-text, I have not here included lines 16a-16d, 28a-28h, and 152a-152d. If they be included, the number becomes 191.

It is evident, therefore, that B occupies an intermediate position with respect to A and C. Hence we are obliged to accept one of the following alternatives: either (1) A derives from B; in which case either C is derived from B, or else B is derived from C; or (2) B derives from A; in which case it follows that C must be derived from B.¹

The second of these alternatives, as I hope to show, is the true one. The evidence offered has to do both with structure and wording, but as these in some cases cannot be considered separately, I have made no attempt at a rigid distinction between the two classes of evidence. In the succeeding discussion, unless otherwise stated, any manuscript of either version will serve to exemplify the facts pointed out, except, of course, where part of the text of a manuscript is missing. Passages quoted have, where possible, been taken from ms. G in Version A and from ms. C in Version B, for these manuscripts furnish, on the whole, the best texts of their respective versions.²

It seems advisable to begin with a passage, which even without other evidence, would, in my opinion, be sufficient to show that B was taken from A. Let us compare A 171-86 with B 267-322.

First, if we suppose that A was derived from B, we must assume that the author of A skipped about in the text before him and picked out his lines (omitting some entirely) in this sequence: B 267-8; 293-4; 297-300; 283-4; 289-90; 277-8; 321-2. While the altered order of these lines might be explained on the hypothesis that A wished to restore the order of events according to the Scriptural narrative, by placing the committal of the Virgin to St. John before the cry Pater lamazabatani; ³ yet this is not a satisfactory solution, since A was not following the Scriptural account very closely.⁴ Secondly, upon this hypothesis it would be hard to account for his having altered the subject matter of B 300-20.

On the other hand, if we suppose that B was taken from A, the situation, as it seems to me, admits of a plausible explanation. First, we should have the following sequence: A 171-2; 8 new lines; 183-4; 4 new lines; 179-80; 4 new lines; 181-2; 2 new lines; 173-4; 2 new lines; 175-8; 20 new lines; 185-6. This would mean simply that A 179-84 were taken out of their place and inserted between 172 and 173, but that the last two were put in first. B's reasons for these changes can, I think, be explained, if one notes that in the A-text the passage we are considering covers only sixteen lines, all of which probably lay before the reviser on a single page, so that his alterations would not involve the turning of leaves or reading ahead for any considerable distance.⁵ B, being, as we suppose, a reviser and not a mere copyist, read lines 171-186 of A before writing them down. On coming to A 177-80, he did not grasp their meaning:

177 þ^t I ne hadde wher to take My testament wherof to make

⁵ Had A, on the contrary, been the reviser, he would have been dealing with a block of text comprising fifty-four lines, and his task would have been much more complicated.

But of my moder lef and dere
 180 Sho stod by me wiþ reuful chere [ms. G].

Line 178 probably suggested to him—as it did to me on first reading—that Christ had nothing out of which to make His Testament, just as He had no parchment for His Charter, lines 51-54.⁶ The next line, then, would have no connection, and would, to him, mean simply, “But to speak of my mother, she stood by me sorrowing,” etc. Hence the lines mentioning the Testament would look like an isolated couplet, meaning little, and separating two groups relating to the Virgin. But lines 175-77:

So bare I was of wordles god
 Whan I sholde deye vpon þe rod þat I ne hadde wher to take [ms. G] did suggest to B the text of Scripture in which Christ declares that He has nowhere to lay His head.⁷ This inspired

• Ne mighte I fynde no parchemyn
 ffor to laston wel and fyn
 But as loue bad me do
 Myn owne skyn y ȝaf þer to [ms. G].

⁶ St. Matthew VIII. 20: “And Jesus saith unto him, ‘The foxes have holes, and the birds of the heaven have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.’” [Rev. Vers.] Cf. also St. Luke IX. 58. The treatment of this theme was sufficiently common in the Middle Ages. See for example, Disputation between Mary and the Cross, Minor Poems of the Vernon MS. II. (E. E. T. S. Orig. Ser. 117) 614.

ffoules fourmen heor nestes in þe eyr;
 Wolues, in den, reste þei fynde;
 But Godes sone, in heuene heir,
 His hed nou leoneþ on þornes tynde.

Cf. also Thien, Ueber die Eng. Marienklagen (Kiel 1906) 51, who refers in this connection to the Lamentacio sancti Bernardi, ed. Kribel, Eng. Stud. VIII. 85 ff., lines 369-72:

allas, þin heuid þei al torace, þat was wonid lye to my brest:
 I saw it honge & had no space,
 Wher on it myghte ouht han reste.

B's imagination to enlarge upon the theme, and so, after prefixing two lines (295-6):

Vpon my shuldur y layde myn hedde Whan y þrow; faste vnto my deed [B-text, ms. A].

by way of introduction, he changed A 178 to what we find in B 300:

Reste to myne hedde wher-of to make and followed it by a long digression upon Christ's having no rest in the world, etc.

But this passage of B's, if written directly after A 178, would separate widely the two dealing with the Virgin Mary. So B moved the second of these (179-184) back to connect it with the first (A 171-2), making interpolations to develop the theme of the Virgin's grief, a subject which appealed strongly to the mediæval imagination.⁸ In this shifting, however, A 183-4 is put first instead of last where it would ordinarily occur:

In cnowlychyng I made a cry
Pater lamazabatany

B making slight alterations. Curiously enough, A and B both connect the cry Pater lamazabatany with our Lord's distress at seeing His mother's suffering. It is possible, therefore, that B thought that the proper place for it was, not after the committal of the Virgin to St. John, but immediately connected with lines 171-2 and the new lines B 269-76, which deal very vividly with the Virgin's grief. Or, another reason for the position B gives to 183-4 might be ⁸The fact that B chose to connect A 173-174 with what followed it rather than with what preceded it, is confirmation of this explanation, as it shows that B did not grasp the meaning of the passage. He doubtless took testament 178 as referring to chartre 173, regarding 173-178 as a unit. Perhaps his copy of the Charter was entitled Testament of Christ, as is the version of ms. Vernon.

that he wished to make Christ's cry of dereliction the cause of the swooning of Mary, which he introduces as a new feature in the lines following, B 279-80.

It is interesting to note the changes B made in A 179-80:

But of my moder lef and dere
Sho stod by me with rueful chere [ms. G].

We recognize them in B 283-4, altered in such a manner as to incorporate them into the description of the scene with less abruptness:

When y layde my hedde her & þer
My moþer changed all he[r] chere [ms. A].

Moreover, a very significant alteration is that made by B in A 171-2, which read as follows:

And namely my moder swete ffor she lufte neuer teres lete [ms. G].

ffor she is in B altered to the relative pronoun that, because B wished to begin the interpolated passage immediately following, with for, thus:

267 And namely my modyr swete
That for me bloody teres gan lete
269 ffor þer she stode unþer þe rode [B-text, ms. A]

The next passage we shall examine is A 29-42 = B 57-72. The most important differences between the two texts here involve: A 41-42 = B 72-71; A 37-38 = B 59-60; and B 69-70, which has no equivalent in A. Now B 71-72, as it stands, does not make good sense:

69 Nowe derworthly soule herke to me
And A newe Ioye I xal telle the
To make A chartore of feffement
72 heuen And erth schuld be present [ms. C].

Line 71 cannot be connected with line 70, and if connected with 72 the statement means nothing. Heaven and earth were not to make the Charter! But upon examining these lines in A, we find that they are joined in thought and syntax to lines 38-40:

- 37 Wel he fond hym geyned noȝt 38 another help was in my pouȝt more syker þe to make 40 a geȝn þi fo ful of wrake
 Heuene and erthe in present 42 To make a chartre of feffement [ms. G], and mean clearly enough: "another help was in my mind to make thee more safe against thy foes, namely, heaven and earth being present, to make a charter of feoffment." The infinitive to make of line 42 is in apposition with another help of line 38. But line 38 (= B 60) is very different in the B-text, and stands in an altogether different place, i. e., immediately before the description of the temptation, B 61 (= A 29):

- 59 wroth he was it helpe hyme nouȝte for to helpe the was All my thoughte he tempted me to gret folȝ in pride covetyse And gloteny [B-text, ms. C].

This leaves the infinitive to make, B 71 (A 42), without logical connection. B did not see, or else he forgot, the intimate relation existing between lines 38 and 42 of A. So, wanting some material to make the transition between A 28 and 29 less abrupt—

- 27 Tho belsabub and sathanas 28 Hadde gret wounder whi it was
 He fonde me wiȝ felonye
 39 Wiȝ pryde couetise and gloteny [ms. G]—

~~he moved A 37-38 up to this point, altering as he desired,~~

he moved A 37-38 up to this point, altering as he desired, and prefixed two explanatory lines of his own, B 57-58:

- 55 þat cursed fende Sathanas hade gret wondyr why it was 57 wher for I schulde so meche loue the 58 that so unkend hast be to me
59 wroth he was it helpe hym noughte, [B-text, ms. C].

This assuredly improves the poem, for in A 28 the expression whi it was is by no means clear, and the transition from line 28 to 29 is very abrupt.

But this left A 39-42 in bad shape. The author of B now cut out 39-40 which had lost their connection, and substituted two lines of his own (69-70) perhaps for the purpose of emphasizing the Charter, which is here mentioned for the first time:

- 69 Nowe derworthly soule herke to me
70 And A newe Ioye I xal telle the

This, of course, left A 41-42 absolutely stranded. So B altered them to read as follows:

- 71 To make A chartore of feffement
72 heuene And erth schuld be presente [ms. C].

Had the author of B been the author of the poem, he would have changed these lines to read:

- heuene And erth in presente
I make A chartore of feffement thus making good sense, as well as fulfilling the grammatical requirements. But B shows in his treatment of this passage that he has not grasped A's idea at all, and feebly alters the lines so that, though remaining grammatically correct, they are logically without point. We have, therefore, in B 57-72, clear evidence, not only that B was derived from A, but also that the author of the B-text was not the author of the Charter, but a reviser only.⁹

The construction of B 93-102 also throws light upon the question of the priority of A over B:

- 89 Parchement to fynde wyst I none 90 To make thy charture Aȝene thy fone pat wolde last wyth oute ende herkenyth now to my wordes hende
 93 but as trewe loue bad me do Myn owne skynne I toke pere-to 95 And whanne I hade ȝit so I-do
 96 wul fewe frendes had I þo
 97 to get me frendes I ȝaf gret mede as doth þe pore þat hath gret nede
 But for to ȝeue the I hade no more 100 for thi sowle þat was for-lorne þanne myselfe for to ȝeue the 102 þat for the dyed vppon A tre [ms. C].

Lines 95-96 are very poor, and their logical connection with the preceding is not of the clearest. Moreover, the next six lines do not progress but leave us at the end just where we started. The thought of the passage might be expressed in this way: "as true love bade me, I gave my own skin for the Charter. When I had done this, I had but few friends; to get some I gave good reward, but had nothing to give but myself." Now I believe that this awkwardness arose from B's not grasping A's thought. The parallel passage in A runs as follows:

- 51 ne myȝte I fynde no parchemyn
 52 ffor to laston wel and fyn

⁹The changes made by B in A 33-36 (B 65-68) are unimportant, and doubtless arose from B's effort to improve upon A. Certainly A 34 is a very poor line.

But as loue bad me do
 Myn owne skyn y ȝaf þer-to 55 To gete me frendes I ȝaf god mede
 So doþ þe pore þat haþ gret nede [ms. G].

It will be noted that A lacks B 95-96 and 99-102. A's meaning is undoubtedly this: "as love bade me do, I took my own skin for the parchment—to obtain followers (disciples) I gave good reward indeed; just as the poor man does in his need"; i. e. the reward, or payment, is the giving of His skin to be used as parchment, or, in other words, the death upon the Cross.¹⁰ Since B missed the connection between A 54 and 55, he thought the reference to friends must be made clear; and having in mind those who forsook the Lord in the time of His need, he inserted lines 95-6 to lead up in some degree to line 97. In the same way, supposing the word mede, in A 55, to be without connection, he wrote 99-102 to show what the mede was. Had B been the original, and A the revised text, it would be difficult to find a satisfactory explanation for A's omission of B 95-6 while retaining 97-98, and for his omission of 99-102.

The next passage indicating that B was derived from A is found in A 165-71 = B 251-67. A reads:

165 Aþorst I was ful sore y-swonke þe beuerache moste neþes ben þronke
 A loue drynk I asked of þe
 Eysel and galle þou ȝeue me

¹⁰ As I understand A in this passage, there is no intention of leading up to the Last Supper in the expression: I ȝaf good mede. The Last Supper was not instituted by Christ in any sense as a bribe, or price of men, nor could it have been so conceived by A. Indeed, both A and B describe the Eucharist as being intended "Boþe frend and fo to maky glade" (ms. G, line 58) with heavenly food, and to be the memorial of the Passion of Christ. Hence the colon punctuation after line 56 of the Vernon text, in the E. E. T. S. edition, p. 641, is wrong, and a period should be substituted.

Hijz testibus Matheus and Iohan

170 Luk Mark and many on

171 And namely my moder swete [MS. G].

Now in B 251-4, corresponding to A 165-8, we see preparations leading to the introduction of a new idea, namely, a figurative drink asked of man by the Lord, which is developed in B 255-264 (not occurring in A). Beginning at 251, B reads:

- 251 Well drye y was & thursted sore
But of such drynk myȝth y no more ffor aysell & galle þey ȝef to me
But on drynke aske y of þe
- 255 That þou be louyng towards þy fone oþer drynke of þe aske y non ȝef þou me loue haue þis yn mynde
 To þy enemyes be þou ryght kynde
 Ensaumpull þou myȝt take her of me
- 260 For loue of my fone y honge on tre

 Vpon my enemyes þat þou haue pyte
 And as y do do þou to þyne
 Then saued shalt þou be fro helle pyne
- 265 He ben wytnesses mo þen on Marke Mathew luke & jon [MS. A].

The preparatory lines 251-4 are, however, not skilfully managed by B. Line 252, which has no equivalent in A, is wellnigh meaningless. But the significant feature about them lies in the inversion of the order of lines 253-4 from that in the A-text. It is clear that B made this change because "on drynke aske y of þe" leads up better to his interpolated passage 255 ff.¹¹ Moreover, it will be noticed that the interpolation of B 255-264 leaves lines 265-266 (A 169-170) without connection with what precedes them. In A, however, these two lines are in very close connection with the preceding lines. The differences that appear in this passage between the two texts are easily explainable on the hypothesis that B is derived from A, but are much less easily intelligible on the contrary hypothesis.

¹¹ One might question whence B could have drawn this peculiar conception of "on drynke . . . that þu be louyng," etc. Perhaps the word loue-drynke in A suggested it to him; or possibly he copied loue as one because he missed seeing the l (it may have been illegible or widely separated from the rest of the word).

Again in B, lines 197-8, which have no equivalent in A, suggest a misunderstanding of the A-text on the part of the author of B:

197 In my blyful Ioye euyr to dwelle
198 for þe rent þat I xal þe telle [ms. C].

Now B inserts these lines between 116 and 117 of the following passage of the A-text, separating a direct object from its verbs, and implying a false relation:

107 Wip my chartre here in present [B 187]
I make heron confirmament [B 188]
That I haue granted and yȝeue [B 189]
110 To þe mankynde with me to leue [B 190]
In my revme of heuon blisse
To haue & to holden with-uten mysse
In a condicioun jif þou be kynde
And my loue dedes haue in mynde
115 ffre to haue and fre to holde [B 195]
116 Wip al þe purtinaunce to wolde [B 196]
117 Min erytage þat is so fre [B 199] ffor homage ne for fewte [B 200]
No more wole I aske of þe [B 201]
120 But a four leued gras to ȝelde me [ms. G].

Min erytage, line 117, is the direct object of to haue and to holde in 115. But in B this object is separated by lines 197-8 from its verbs. Moreover, line 198 introduces the mention of rent, which does not belong at this point, but after 199 (= A above, line 118). I believe this interpolation shows that B did not observe the connection of min erytage with to have and to holde of A 115, but supposed their object to be the same as that of to have & to holden with-outen mysse in A 112, namely, a feffement, which B substituted for the confirmament of A 108.¹²

There are, in A, certain words and expressions that B seems to have altered either because they were archaic or unfamiliar to him, or because they were not sufficiently refined for his taste. These alterations I offer as evidence corroborative of what it has been my effort to prove in the preceding paragraphs of this chapter:

A 29: fondes or fondede	= B 61: tempted
A 67: kirtel	= B 135: mantylle
A 74: forletton	= B 140: forsoken
A 75: piht, or plyt	= B 151: bound ¹³
A 76: tawed	= B 152: beten
A 83: ncb, nesse ¹⁴	= B 161: face
A 84: Of iewes spotel on me to stynke ¹⁵	= B 162: thornes in my hed gan to synke
A 136: stiþ	= B 218: smyth
A 141: þurledon, or thrille- don	= B 225: smyten
A 165: yswonke or swon- gen	= B 251: dry
A 209: bykeþe or bykeye	= B 361: a wel faire thyng
A 212: þar þe not drede	= B 364: to kepe þe euer
A 218: camelyn	= B 376: satyn

¹² In Dr. Furnivall's print of Harl. 2382, Minor Poems of the Vernon ms. II. (E. E. T. S.) the punctuation of a period after line 198, and of a comma after line 199, is therefore incorrect. There should be a period after 199, and a comma after 198.

¹³ But see line 247, where the word is retained.

¹⁴ Ms. H of the A-text reads face, but, as will be seen later (Chapter v. § 4), the readings of this ms. do not affect those of the B-text.

¹⁵ mss. I and K read differently; but see Chapter v. § 4.

Now since a revised text is necessarily of a later date than its original, there is a strong probability that it will show modernization, rather than archaization, of vocabulary; hence the above list certainly contributes to the argument that A is the original text. It adds force also to the argument that B was not written by A.

This concludes the evidence I have to offer regarding the dependence of B upon A.¹⁶

It has already been demonstrated (pp. lxix f.) that if B is derived from A, C is derived from B. If, therefore, my argument for the derivation of B from A is sound, it follows as a necessary consequence that C was derived from B. Nevertheless, it seems desirable to consider certain passages of B and C, both because they show that the differences between the two texts confirm the validity of my argument, and ¹⁶The two following lists of classified interpolations made in the poem by B may prove of interest as showing B's contribution to the material he found. Interpolations discussed in the preceding pages are not recorded here, since they have already been accounted for.

With B, lines 20a-22 (C 25-28), compare the Lamentacio Sanote Marie of the Vernon ms. (E. E. T. S. Orig. Ser. 98, p. 298) lines 15-16:

þe mon þat con, and teche nille,
He mai haue drede of godes wreche.

B's additions in 154-156, and 177-178, present difficulties, in that the former is a clumsy repetition of 151-152, and the latter does not join with what follows.

because they enable us to perceive the method which the author of C pursued.

The Charter, in the A- and B-texts, makes a grant of eternal life in heaven to man. See B 37-39 and 188 ff.:

Myne erytage that is so fre
In þi myschefe I ȝaf the
And whanne þat solyngē A ȝeue þe solde, etc.

I make to mannes Soule a feffementē þat I haue grantyd and I-ȝeue
To mankend wyth me for to be
In my kindome of hevene blysse [ms. C], which correspond to A 11-13, and 108-111. Now C has changed myn heritage to my blysfyl body, lines 67 ff., thus substituting the Sacrament as Christ's gift to man. This is in accord with C's emphasis upon the Sacrament all through (for instance, note his interpolations of 132-138; 141-154; and 560-64). But when referring, in a later passage, to the grant made by Christ's Charter, C does not seem to remember his previous alteration of heritage to my blysfyl body, and retains the idea of heaven in the grant, as in B. See C 264-72:

264 þat I ihesus of nazaret, godys sone, 265 as gyn for euer, & grauntyd, and be þis charter confermed, how mans sawle in my joy to belde, Wyt all þe purtenance þer with to welde, to af & to hald with-outy[n] mysse 270 þat for-sayd place, heuen blysse,
In þat blyssed place for euer to dwell,
272 for þe rent þat I sall þe tell

Next, let us consider an important alteration made by C in the following lines from B:

- 353 Oon endentur y lafte with þe
 Wher-of þou shalt euer sykur be 355 In þe prestus honde my flessch & blode
 That for þe was honged on þe rode [ms. A].

This reads, in C:

- 557 þis charter þus celyd, lewe I wyll þe,
 Ware-by þu sall ay sekyr be:
 My precyus body, of þe preste hande
 560 for to resaywe, þu sall vnderstand

On comparing C 557 with B 353, we see that C has changed the word indenture of B (as of A) to charter. Here C misses the whole point of the allegory as conceived by A and followed by B. For note that in A and B, the Charter is that Body of Christ which was sacrificed on the Cross, written upon by scourges, sealed with nails and spear, and completed by the death of Him who grants it—“Consummatum est, þis Charter is doon”; but the Body of Christ as present in the Eucharist is the Indenture:

- B 353 Oon endentur y lafte with þe
 In þe prestus honde my flessch & blode, etc.

They are, of course, in a sense, identical, yet different. Now originally, an indenture was a deed having two copies. “Both copies,” says the New English Dictionary, “were written on one piece of parchment or paper, and then cut asunder in a serrated or sinuous line, so that when brought together again at any time, the two edges exactly tallied, and showed that they were parts of one and the same original document: hence the expression ‘pair of indentures.’” This, it is stated, is the earliest sense of the word.¹⁷ The conception of A, followed by B, is, then, that the Sacramental Body of Christ is the copy of the ascended Crucified Body, given to man by the Saviour as surety of the heavenly heritage. The Charter is to be read at the last day (cf. A 228, B 386); but those who have received the Sacramental Body, the "Indenture," may claim their inheritance when they will.¹⁸

This ingenious and poetical application of the figure in the word indenture was overlooked by the author of C, who, as has been pointed out, alters the word to charter; so that what was, in A and B, a consistent and effective allegory becomes, in C, a confused mixture of two ill-defined ideas—namely, the literal and sacramental aspects of Christ's Body; indeed, I should say of three ideas, since the heritage of heaven is also involved (in 269-73, previously quoted).

Another passage radically altered by C, requires notice, namely, B 267-292 (= C 333-364). The significant changes are chiefly in the order of the lines, and usually we can trace C's reason for the shiftings. The first point to be noticed is the insertion of B 289-292 after B 270 and the interpolation of C following it, and of B 279-82 immediately after these—changes resulting in C 351-358.

This shifting is easy to understand. B 289-92 is as follows:

289 When seyn john y her betoke
290 She caste on me a drwly loke ar, And that Ilk nyght writyn war Thair Endenturis, and aythis maid." Another is from Caxton's Chron. Eng. CXLVIII. 127: "The fourme of accord . . . was in a payr of Endentures and they put her seales vnto that one part, and they that comen in the kynges name putt her seales to that other part of endentures."

¹⁸ Cf. A 232: Come and cleyne whan pou wilt pe blisse þat loste oure former frende, and lines in B expressing a similar idea.

As þou; y hadde her all forsake 292 And to an-oper sone her be take [MS. A; = C 351-54]

and B 270 (referring to the Virgin):

She sawe my body all on blode [= C 336]

After this line C has inserted an interpolation of fourteen lines, developing the scene at the Cross more fully, the last five of which record the committal of St. Mary to St. John:

345 & I sayd to my moder Mary:
 'Be-halde þi sone þat standes þe by!'
 To Ion I spak wordes of pyte:
 'Behald þi moder! hy tak hyre to þe'
 Wen I spak þis wordes þere,
 350 Vntyll hyre hart þai went ful nere;

At this point, therefore, it would naturally occur to C that the above lines in B, 289-92 relating to the same subject, fit better here than where they stand in B. C accordingly inserts them at the end of his interpolation, consequently after B 270.

He next inserts B 279-282 directly after this altered passage, as follows:

C 355 Onone scho fell downe in swounynge
 Be-for þe cros at my dyynges þe paynes þat I hade were full sore,
 C 358 Bot for my moder þai were wel more!

Thus C evidently preferred that the swooning of the Virgin should result from her being resigned to St. John rather than from Christ's cry, Ely lamazabatany. To be delivered over to the care of another would bring home to a mother's heart more bitterly than anything else would, what her son's death was to mean to her. The touch is a natural one, and shows keen insight into human nature. Accordingly, C is obliged also to change the position of B 277-8, containing Christ's cry, to a point where it shall no longer be the occasion of the Virgin's swooning. Hence, after aptly changing "for sorow of her y made a cry" (B 277) to "for soro of my passioun I made a cry," C inserts B 277-8 before B 273-6, where they produce the effect of merely intensifying the Virgin's misery. This is, however, not a very satisfactory change, since it leaves Christ's cry still in the midst of a description of the Virgin's grief, instead of, as in A and the Scriptures, immediately preceding Christ's death, its proper place:

|-------|---------------------------------------|-----------|
| C 357 | þe paynes þat I hade were full sore | [= B 281] |
| 358 | Bot for my moder þai were wel more! | [= B 282] |
| 359 | ffor soro of my passion I made a cry, | [= B 277] |
| 360 | A cryed 'hely lama zabatany.' | [= B 278] |
| | it semed my moder hart wald brek; | [= B 274] |
| | No worde to me þer myght scho speke; | [= B 273] |
| | No wonder was if hyre were wo, | [= B 275] |
| 364 | Wen sho saw me dyght so!, etc. | [= B 276] |

Observe too, that whereas B had shifted the episode of the committal of the Virgin to a point after the Saviour's last cry, C has returned to the original sequence in placing the cry after the committal, as in A. To do this it was not necessary that he should have seen a copy of A, for in all the Gospels the "Eli! Eli! lama-sabachthani," or another cry not expressed in words, is uttered by Christ just before His death; and C may very well have noticed the false sequence in B, and have sought to alter it.

An omission from C of twenty-nine lines of B (94-122) requires special notice. The gap is just after C 131. Instead of the B lines that would naturally stand here, the C-text gives seven new lines, and then goes on to B 123-4. These B lines, however, were not dropped by C himself, but by the loss of a leaf from some manuscript between C's own text and our copy, ms. Royal 17. C xvii., as an examination of C's seven new lines and their relation to the preceding text will show:

- | | | |
|-----|---|---------|
| 127 | to mak þi charter of þi wele-fare, | [B 90] |
| | parchemen to fynde wyst I neuer ware | [B 89] |
| | þat wyld last to þe warldes end;— | [B 91] |
| 130 | harkyns now to my wordes hend!— | [B 92] |
| | Bot as trew loue bad me do, | [B 93] |
| | loke ware I af not done so. | |
| | þis wordys are þus to vnderfong | |
| | to lewed men in ynglys tong: | |
| 135 | My flesche trewly es mans fode, | |
| | þat for mans saule dyed on þe rode; | |
| | My blode for sothe þi drynk sal be, | |
| | þat for þe was sched on þe rod[e] tre. | |
| | Wo-so it resaywes wyt-outyn mys, | [B 123] |
| 140 | Sawyd sal he be, & cum to blys; | [B 124] |

It will be evident that the seven new lines do not connect with what goes before, but contain an explanation of the Sacrament. Now since a reference to the Last Supper, followed by an explanation of the Sacrament, is exactly what we have in the missing text of B, it is probable that C's seven new lines were merely an addition made by him to B 94-122, which were present in the copy from which he was transcribing, and that þis wordys, of C 133, refer to Hoc facite in meam commemoracionem, which occur in the missing passage.¹⁹ That this rubric stood, in the original text

- | | |
|-----|---------------------------------|
| 526 | To cry full loud my son bigan: |
| | 'Hely, hely,' his crying was, |
| | 'Lamazabatany' efter þan. |

[from ms. Rawl. poet. 175.]

of B, directly after line 122,²⁰ is probable, because the marginal rubric of ms. E, memoriam fecit [mir]abilium suor[um], is written opposite lines 121-22, thus seeming to agree with A, which records the rubric Hoc facite etc., at this point.²¹ Moreover, upon the hypothesis that the missing text of B was retained by C, we can explain C 167, "Bot or þat I fra þe borde rase"; should we assume the contrary hypothesis this line would be left unrelated to what goes before.²² A word must be said regarding line 132 in C. This line, as it seems to me, must have been composed by the scribe who was using as copy the manuscript from which the leaf was lost, in order to complete the couplet with line 131. It is manifestly not a part of the C addition which follows it.

Beginning with line 379, C has inserted a long passage extending to 453, and comprising chiefly a lament of the Virgin Mary, which is addressed to Mary Magdalene. The scene is at the Cross. The Magdalene's replies are in much the same vein as the Virgin's lamentation. Hermann Thien, in his dissertation, Ueber die Englischen Marienklagen (Kiel 1906) has already pointed out that the author of the Charter has used for this passage material from a Planctus in the form of a dialogue between the Virgin and St. Bernard, in which the Virgin narrates the sufferings and death of Jesus, and bewails her bereavement. This Planctus has been several times printed: by G. Kribel in 1885,²³ by Horstmann in 1892,²⁴ and by W. Fröhlich in 1902.²⁵ Thien, and he calls attention to line 413 ff. of the Charter, which, as he says, "beweisen dass der Dichter des Testaments [i. e. of the Charter] aus der Lamentacio abschrieb, und dass nicht etwa das umgekehrte Verhältniss vorliegt." I quote the lines in question:

- 413 I prayd hyre go were hyre wyllis was 415 I prayd þam go weder þai wolde,

 I quote this pair of parallels by way of illustration:

"Diese Verse haben Sinn nur im Munde der Maria, die sie in der Lamentacio auch spricht; der Dichter hat nach Uebernahme der Mkl. Aus Z [i. e. the Planctus] einen Augenblick vergessen, dass nach der Anlage seines Stückes Jesus erzählt und nun fortfahren müsste." Thien is undoubtedly right; cf. lines 417 ff., especially me in 419, which of course means Christ.²⁷

For the remainder of the Virgin's lament, as it is contained in the Charter, lines 424-34, Thien says that he knows no source. It is quite possible that C himself may be the author of this, and of the conventional description of the effect of the Virgin's grief upon her, which occupies the lines immediately following.²⁸

²⁸ Attention should be called to the misplacement in C of lines 523-556 (= B 217-250). The passage covers the description of the seals of the Charter, and in A and B it follows immediately upon the words of the Deed as read by Christ. In C, however, it occurs directly after the mention of Easter—hence, after the descent into hell and the Resurrection:

521 þe fest was of ioy & blyse
 Pasche-day called it ese þe seles þat þe charter es seled with 524 þai ware made at a smythe; etc.

At first I thought the passage must have been on a loose page in C's original, which had somehow slipped in at the wrong place. But, though this may be the explanation, the lines immediately following appear to have been altered from what they were in B in order to unite with it closely, thus making the shifting seem intentional:

C 557 þis charter þus celyd lewe I wyll þe
 ware by þu sall ay sekyr be My precious body, of the preste hande which compare with the corresponding lines in B (353-55):

one indenture y left to the,
 where-of þu shalt euer syker be
 In prestys handes my fleshe & blode

If C purposely shifted the position of the description of the sealing, he lost rather than gained, since the proper place for it was after the reading of the Deed, more especially as the Deed was not sealed after the Resurrection but on the Cross:

- B 217 Thes selys that it is selyd with [= C 523, etc.]
 they were made alle at a Smyth of gold ne Siluer were thei noght of Stile and yren were thei wroght with a spere of Stile myn hert was stonge 222 thurf my syde & thurf my lunge

 225 with yren nayles they smyten me thurghe fete & handes on þe rode-tre
 The selyng-wax was dere y-boght
 228 at myn herte-rote it was sought, etc. ms. X.

VERACITY AND INTER-RELATIONS OF MANUSCRIPTS OF THE LONG CHARTER

§ 1. THE A-TEXT

A study of the most important variations in the manuscript readings of Version A leads to the following conclusions:

I. That G is the best manuscript, having preserved more of the readings of the common original than any other of the extant manuscripts.

II. That there are, in A, two main groups, namely, G and IKFVHJL, the latter of which is subdivided into IK and FVHJL, and FVHJL again into FV and HJL.

III. That none of these manuscripts can be shown to be a direct copy of another without the intervention of other copies.

Slight variations in readings have not been considered in the present investigation, since the possibility of chance correspondence in minor details makes it unsafe to base conclusions upon them. Evidence of the veracity of the various manuscripts, considered with reference to the text of the common original, and evidence of manuscript inter-relations, must alike be derived from the presence, in certain manuscripts, of readings which we can ascertain to be spurious. The following lines afford evidence of this character, the decisive lines, containing clear errors, being distinguished by an asterisk from the corroboratory lines, which contain probable errors: 17*, 22*, 79*, 122*, 147*, 149*, 218*, and 12, 57, 76, 83, 84, 90, 206.

We shall take up the decisive readings first in order.

*Line 17: Correct, GIK. Spurious, FVHJL. Here the readings in FVHJL make no sense. The reference is not to Christ and man, but to Christ alone.

*Line 22: Correct, GFVIK. Spurious, HJL. As in line 17, this reference should not include man, since Christ alone was received by the Virgin.

*Line 122: It is necessary, in order to avoid confusion, to postpone the discussion of this line until the subgroups of the manuscripts are ascertained, since the decision made in regard to this reading affects the main groups only. See pp. c ff.

*Line 147: Correct, GFVHJ. Spurious, IK. See the context, especially line 149.

*Line 149: Correct, GVHJ. Spurious, FIK. The word fyfþ refers, of course, to the fifth seal. Fyrst is a scribal blunder. Cf. for this line also p. cviii.

*Line 218: Correct, HJ. Spurious, GFVIK. The original reading must have been as it is in HJ, white camelyn, since the reference is evidently to the skin of our Lord's Body. Moreover, three lines down, this camelyn is described as being ypoudred wiþ fyf roses red, the Five Wounds. Red camelyn scattered over with red roses could hardly have been the picture in the mind of the author. The reading red camelyn may possibly have been due to a confusion, in the mind of some scribe, with the scarlet robe which the Jews (according to St. Matthew's Gospel) put upon Christ at the time of the mocking. He may have forgotten for the moment that the figure had reference to Christ's Body. Cf. also for this line pp. xcvii f.

Corroboratory Readings.

¹ As the text of ms. L comes to an end with line 62, L will not in future be accounted for in references to lines after that point.

Line 12: Correct, GFVHJL. Spurious, IK. IK has altered the infinitive construction, which, judging from the context, is evidently intended.

Line 57: Correct, GFVHJL. Spurious, IK. The word soper is more natural in a reference to the institution of the Sacrament than feste,² which is later applied to Easter (197, 203). Here, it is probably a scribal alteration.

Line 76: Correct, probably GFVH (J lacking). Spurious, IK. Tugged and tawed, as the more archaic reading, is likely to have been in the original. Cf. p. lxxxi.

Lines 83, 84: Correct, GFVH (J lacking). Spurious, IK. The alterations here were evidently introduced by the scribe of IK's source in order to refine the language. Moreover, mss. G and V use the word neb, which is changed in the other manuscripts to the less archaic neese and face.

 spurious, FVH (J lacking): black and $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{wen} \\ \textit{wan}, \end{array} \right.$ (Wan, however, in H and K is not correct, as the rhyme shows). The scribes did not understand the meaning of wen, which was an unusual word.³ The meaning of wen I take to be, beautiful, good to look at; and red and wen here refers to the illumination of the parchment. Red is therefore more appropriate, in this connection, than black.

Line 206: Correct, GFVIK. Spurious, HJ. Note the metre.

Now with regard to the veracity of the manuscripts, it is obvious from the above results that G is nearest to the original text, since it records the correct reading in five of the six decisive lines (I am excluding line 122), and in all the seven corroboratory lines, making together twelve out of thirteen cases.⁴ The other manuscripts follow in this order:

² Especially as Maundy Thursday is, in Latin, Coena Domini.

³ Cf. Bradley-Stratmann: wēne [O. E. (or)-wāna, = Goth. (us-) wēna; O. N. væn; O. H. G. (ur-) wāni] hopeful, beautiful. The only adjective use of this word quoted by B. S. is in the comparative degree; Syr Gawayne and the Grene Knight 945: wēner þen Wenore. In Morris's Glossary this word is traced from O. N. væn, O. Dan. wæn, and defined "fairer."

	DECISIVE LINES	CORROBORATORY LINES	TOTAL
V	4	6	10
H	4	5	9
F	3	6	9
J ^a	3	2	5
K	2	2	4
I	2	1	3
L ^a	—	2	2

Next, let us consider the inter-relations of the manuscripts of A.

For purposes of convenience I wish first to show that, of the extant manuscripts,

- a) I and K have an original common to them alone.
- b) H, J, and L have an original common to them alone.

It has been seen that mss. I and K agree in the erroneous readings of lines 12, 57, 76, 79*, 83, 84, 147*, against the rest. Other readings which they alone have in common are to be found in lines 1, 15, 28, 30, 45, 49, 73, 100, 121, 124, 135, 158, 162, 163, 193, and 199. Moreover, both manuscripts lack lines 69-72, lines 93-96, and lines 139-40 inclusive. These lines occur in all the others, with the exception of lines 69-72, which are also lacking in ms. J. In ms. J, however, lines 69-72 are only four in a block of missing text beginning at line 63 and ending with 90; so that there is no significance in the absence of 69-72 from ms. J, as far as mss. I and K are concerned. Therefore it is clear that mss. I and K are derived from an original common to them alone.

⁴ From this information it is clear that G would be the best ms. upon which to base a critical text of A.

^a Not a full text.

Neither of these manuscripts is a copy of the other. ms. K was not derived from ms. I, as is proved by lines 79*, 90, 218*, and 231. ms. I was not derived from ms. K, for in K lines 63-66, and lines 201-202, are lacking; but they occur in I, as in G and the rest.

Mss. H, J, and L have also a common original to which none of our other manuscripts may be traced. This is established by their agreement in the erroneous readings of lines 20, 22*, and 206, in the latter of which ms. L is, of course, lacking, since it contains but sixty-two lines of text. H, J, and L agree against the other manuscripts also in the readings of lines 38, and 50; and H and J in line 218*, where L is lacking. Their agreement in this line is of particular interest, since it represents a correction, made by the scribe of their common original, of an error traceable to the original of all the extant manuscripts; cf. p. xcvi. Besides, in mss. H and J occur two lines immediately after line 230, which are not found in any of the other manuscripts.⁶

Neither H nor J could have been derived from L, which is only sixty-two lines in length. L was derived neither from H nor from J, as H lacks lines 34-37, and J lacks 29-32 and 55-56 inclusive, all of which are to be found in L. H was not copied from J, as J lacks 29-32, 55-56, and 63-90, which occur in H; and finally, J did not come from H, since H lacks lines 34-37 inclusive, and lines 210 and 212, which J contains. All these omitted lines are to be found in G and the other manuscripts, as regular parts of the Charter.

Passing now to the other manuscript relations, we have seen by the analysis of lines (pp. xciii ff.) the mss. GFVHJ (L) show correct readings against IK's erroneous readings in lines 12, 57, 76, 79*, 83, 84, and 147*. But on examining lines 17* and 90, we find that FVHJL in 17* agree in an erroneous reading, while G and IK are correct, and that in 90 FVH(JL) are erroneous and again G and IK are correct.⁷ Further, we note that in line 218*, GFVIK agree in the erroneous reading, and HJL alone are correct. This is more clearly seen if put in the form below:

	CORRECT		INCORRECT
I.	79* GFVH(JL lacking)	against	IK
	147* GFVHJ(L)	"	IK
	12, 57 GFVHJL	"	IK
	76, 83, 84 GFVH(JL)	"	IK
But
	CORRECT		INCORRECT
II.	17* GIK	against	FVHJL
	90 GK (I unique)	"	FVH(JL lacking) and
	CORRECT		INCORRECT
III.	218* HJ(L)	against	GFVIK

Hence we see, from II., that FVHJL may be traced to a common original from which none of the other manuscripts is derived; and from I., II., and III., that ms. G contains no erroneous reading found in one group (either IK or FVHJL) which does not also occur in the other; for its only erroneous reading appears in line 218, under III., where IK and two manuscripts of FVHJL are also spurious. The fact that F and V record this error shows that it occurred in the original of the group FVHJL, and therefore that the reading of HJ(L) is a correction on the part of the scribe of their source. Here, then, we have evidence of the existence of an error in the common original of all the extant manuscripts of the A-text.

Hence, up to this point, our evidence points to three main groups: G; IK; and FVHJL, in the last of which HJL forms a sub-group, as has already been shown. This evidence, however, is exclusive of what a consideration of the readings of line 122 may afford. But before dealing with the problem of line 122, it will be advisable to settle the relations of mss. F and V to each other and to their source.

Since F and V belong to the group FVHJL, and since HJL forms a sub-group within this group, the question remaining to be answered is, are these manuscripts, F and V, derived independently of each other from the common source of FVHJL, or are they grouped together by readings which assign them to a common source exclusively their own, which takes its origin from the source of FVHJL? That these two manuscripts do form a subgroup by themselves, is established by the readings of lines 6,⁸ 25, 68, 69, and 79*. Lines 68, 69, and 79* by themselves would not be agreements of sufficient significance to prove the existence of the subgroup; but line 25 is strong evidence.

This line introduces another phase of the question, in that its readings point to a Northern original for the mss. F and V. The original rhyme was ydo-fo (see mss. G, H, K and L.

Mss. I and J, do-fo). F and V have the rhyme $\begin{cases} swa-fa \\ so-fo \end{cases}$ —a change which must have been due to a Northern scribe, presumably the scribe of their source, who evidently made the alteration because do-fa, the Northern forms, no longer made even an approximate rhyme. But compare with this the rhyme of 123-4, where V retains the Southern rhyme, while F has altered the line to obtain the Northern a to rhyme with ma:

þe thred I will no mare do swa þe ferth dred god whare so þou ga [ms. F].

* See for this line also pp. cv ff.

That V does not agree with F in this variant shows that the variant is by the hand of the scribe of F, and is not traceable to their common source. Hence, if the scribe of their source were a Northern man, he must have passed over some Southern forms without attempting to change them into his own dialect; possibly he was not skilful enough to do so. The scribe of F himself lets a number of such forms pass unaltered; see lines 49-50; 209-10; 211-12.

Ms. V was certainly not derived from ms. F, as is clear from the reading of 124, and from 48 (where F has altered for the dialect), 209, 210. That ms. F did not come from ms. V is probable from 15 (where F agrees with G) and certain from 23. In this last line the manuscripts read:

G — By my manhede
FHIKL — me my [or þi] manhede
V and J — þorw “ “

What must have happened is, that in the source of IKFVHJL the word me was substituted for By through a misreading, and that mss. V and J corrected the error, while the other manuscripts continued to copy it.

Let us now consider line 122. The discussion of this line was postponed from page xciv, because the determination of the true reading here is a problem towards the solution of which little could be accomplished until we had ascertained the approximate relations of the manuscripts, and arrived at some conclusion with respect to their relative values as regards the preservation of true readings. Line 121, which forms a couplet with 122, must be considered also, as the question of the rhyme is involved.

A study of the different forms taken by these two lines in the various manuscripts shows that the original reading must have been either that of mss. I and K or that of ms. G:

- I. That oon lef ys shrift of herte
 That oþere for synne hert smert
 [from ms. K. I has made some slight changes.]

- II. That on lef is op^on shryft
 That oþer thin herte to smerte skyft
 [from ms. G.]

All the other manuscripts are clearly erroneous, since in none of them does the couplet rhyme:

{ O lef is soþfast schrifte
 { þe toþur is for synne herte smerte
 [from mss. F, V, and H.]

Ms. J gives a variant of no importance, due doubtless to its own scribe:

{ þat on it is soþfastly schryfte
 { þat other it is senne haue sorow

Now, it is by an examination of the error in FVHJ(L) that we may hope to arrive at the true reading of line 122. For this error is manifestly due to one of two causes: its source was either a manuscript in which the phrase of hert was gone from line 121 in couplet I. above, leaving:

That oon lef ys shrift
 That oþere for synne hert smert

or its source was a manuscript in which the word skyft was lost from line 122, leaving the following from couplet II:

That on lef is op^on shryft
 That oþer thin herte to smerte

Should the first cause be the true one, ms. G would share

* In the original, this may have been soþfast, as in FVHJ(L).

the error of FVHJ(L), since it too lacks the phrase of herte. The word opon in G, and soþfast in the other manuscripts, would be supplied to eke out the metrically defective line 121. The word is, in mss. FV and J, could presumably be accounted for in the same way. And finally, the scribe of G, being, we will suppose, of a more inventive turn of mind than the other scribes, would have attempted to correct the rhyme on his own responsibility, whence

That oper thin herte to smerte skyft.

According to this explanation, mss. IK alone would have the true reading of line 122, and our manuscripts would fall into two main groups, ms. G being now united with FVHJ(L) in a common error, as follows:

But, assuming the second to be the true explanation, ms. G would be the only manuscript preserving a true reading of line 122. We must suppose, then, that IK and FVHJ(L) have a common error, due to the loss, in their source, of the word skyft. In the source of IK and FVHJ(L), moreover, the defective line

That oper thin herte to smerte has been altered, for obvious reasons, to

That opere (ys) for synne hert smert.

The scribe of the source of IK has further added the phrase of hert to line 121, in order to correct the rhyme, and has cut out opon or sopfast; but the scribes of FVHJ have left the rhyme false. Our manuscripts would then have the following relations, with two main groups, G and IKFVHJL:

Now, since G is a fifteenth century manuscript, and mss. F and V are both of the fourteenth century, it follows that, as G is derived from a, the source of all the extant manuscripts, another manuscript (B) must have intervened between a and the source of IKFVHJL, in which the word skyft was lost; because a) G contains skyft and b) in the source of IKFVHJL line 122 was already corrupted, as is proved by the common reading of all these manuscripts.¹⁰

¹⁰ If ms. G did not copy directly from a, but from an early manuscript derived from a, this would not necessarily follow; since it would be possible, though hardly probable, that a might have lost the word skyft after the copy had been made from which G was derived.

At length, after having considered what is involved in assuming either of our couplets to be the reading of the original, I arrived at the conclusion that IK is spurious, and that ms. G alone records the true reading; because

1) G is our best manuscript. Whereas I and K have frequently been proved spurious in their readings, in no other instance of which we are certain has ms. G been found to err from the reading of the common original.

2) It is more reasonable to suppose that the extraordinary line 122 in G

That oþer thin herte to smerte skyft ¹¹ was written by the hand of the author himself than to suppose that a scribe, at a loss for a suitable rhyme, was the inventor of it. The word skyft, used in this abstract sense, is very rare. Indeed, the nearest approach to it that I have been able to find is in the Metrical Homilies (1325), line 61: "Bot Godd that skilfulli can skift, mad them," etc., where skyft means to ordain.¹²

¹¹ Certainly what the author meant to express here was one of the three parts of a true repentance—Contrition—which theologically, however, should come before shryft, the regular order being Contrition, Confession, Satisfaction. It is to be noted that ms. I does put Penance second, but this is not significant since I does not mention shryft at all, but for it substitutes love of hert; and since K has the same order as G, shryft first, then hert smert, or Contrition.

3) The expression shryft of hert in K is probably an emendation for the sake of the rhyme, since it is inaccurate as regards meaning, and can not have been what the author intended to express. This emendation we must trace to the source of IK, for the word shryft obviously belonged to the original. The scribe of I, perceiving the inaptness of shryft of hert altered it to loue of hert, as has already been pointed out. It must be remarked with reference to the reading in IK, that it is much more obvious as an emendation than that of G, and would naturally occur to a scribe confronted with the false rhyme shryft-smert.

4) To assume that IK has preserved the correct reading is also to assume that our author was so clumsy as to use the word hert both in 121 and 122, which produces an unpleasant effect in reading the couplet. This is not in accord with his style in the rest of the poem.

5) No objection can be taken either to the metre or to the rhyme of G 122. Indeed, metrically, G 122 is a better line than K 122 or 122 in any of the other manuscripts. As to the rhyme, skyft, as in ms. G, is probably a syncopated form of the present indicative, 3rd person singular,¹³ having as its subject that oþer.

Certain lines offering special difficulties must now be considered separately. The first of these is line 6. Here we have what at first sight would seem evidence of contamination.

¹² For this word see the Glossary. Its ordinary meaning is: to change, move away, assign, divide, in the concrete.

¹³ Cf., for example, syncopated forms of verbs in t, d, s, occurring in the Troilus, Kittredge's Observations of the Language of Chaucer's Troilus (Chaucer Society, second ser. XXVIII.) 220-1, § 95, as blent, sent, last, lyst, put, etc.

Ms. G reads with HJL:

With treson and wythoute gult

Ms. I:

Wyth treson & also with gylt

Ms. K nearly the same:

Wip trosoun and wip þi gylt

Ms. F:

With tresone & with þine awen gylt

Ms. V:

But this situation can be explained without the necessity of assuming contamination.

Manifestly, G and HJL are wrong as they stand, since the second half of the line flatly contradicts the first. The other readings are all possible, so far as sense goes. The readings of F, I, and K would mean that man's expulsion from Paradise was because of treachery towards God, and was due to his own fault; of V, that man was driven out with good reason and by his own fault. But if we assume the readings of any of these manuscripts to be correct, how can we account for the reading of HJL? Certainly contamination would not explain it, since the meaning of the line is spoiled instead of improved by the supposed alteration. The only possible explanation is that the scribe of the source of HJL was copying exactly what he found. In that case, the error must be traced back to α, the source of all the extant manuscripts. The original reading was undoubtedly not tresoun but resoun, and the line ran:

i. e., that man was driven from Paradise for good reason and without injustice. The scribe of α, or of some manuscript perhaps even farther back, prefixed a t to the word resoun, very likely because the t of w^t was near enough to confuse him. Hence ms. G's reading. The mistake was retained in β and γ and again in θ. The scribes of ε and ζ, however, emended the texts they found, since the reading puzzled them, as well it might. This would also explain the variant in V.

The readings of line 19 should be noted. All the manuscripts but G, read forty weeks and forty days in referring to the period of time between the conception of Christ and His birth. Ms. G reads forty weeks saue V. days. I am inclined to think that G is correct, and that the other manuscripts record a corruption traceable to γ or to β. If we imagine "saue" written "s aue," with the s rather far from the other letters and pretty close to the preceding word (which ends in s), we can see how the scribe could have omitted to connect it with saue. The final e may very easily have looked like d. In some manuscripts it is impossible to tell the difference between e and d except from the context. Next, there is the figure V., or the word fyue (or fyfe, or fyue, or fife). The word may have been blurred all but the initial f, whence the scribe was left to conjecture as to the original. In that case, he may have written forty for the sake of the sound effect it would produce with the first forty; or simply as a guess, without thinking of the meaning he was conveying. I see no other explanation for this line.¹⁴

¹⁴ In the Charter of the Abbey of the Holy Ghost (of MS. Laud 210, printed by Horstmann, Richard Rolle I. 352) the period between the conception of Christ and His birth is reckoned as nyne and þritty wekes & a day, or 274 days. Piers the Plowman B xvi. 100, gives fourty wokes. St. Augustine, De Trinitate Lib. iv. Cap. v. [Migne, Pat. Lat. XLII. col. 894], records it as 276 days: "Dixerunt enim: 'Quadrages et sex annis ædificatum est templum' [St. John II. 19]. Et quadragies series seni, fiunt ducenti septuaginta sex. Qui numerus dierum complet novem menses et sex dies, qui tanquam decem menses parientibus feminis imputantur: non quia omnes ad sextum diem post nonum mensem

The next problem is that presented by the various readings of lines 29 to 37 inclusive. In 29, the pronoun he can be either singular or plural. We should expect a plural pronoun throughout, referring to Belsebub and Satanas in 27, as consistently in ms. V. G, F, and L, however, take the word he as singular, to judge from what follows, and continue to do so throughout, doubtless having Satan alone in mind, since two devils tempting Christ are not Scriptural. Ms. I leaves one in doubt; he is used in some lines, pei in others, but the possessives are all plural. H, J, and K vary; H begins with the plural, and changes to the singular with line 31. J does the same, changing however, at 35 to the singular. K is plural up to 33, when it too changes to the singular form. On the whole, there seems to me no safe way of grouping the manuscripts according to the singular and plural readings of these lines. There is too much that might easily confuse a scribe; the possibility of taking he in either way, and the danger of forgetting that two fiends are involved where but one would be expected.

Another case of the same nature is to be found in the readings of line 149. Fyff is certainly the true reading. The variant fyrst of mss. F, I, and K, I believe to be a natural error of the scribes of F and of the source of IK, who doubtless misread the word because they expected that after the enumeration Father and Son, God and Man, each seal would be more fully described, beginning with the first.

Finally, there are certain agreements in the readings of manuscripts not grouped together, which may be attributed either to chance coincidence or to cross influence. I should attribute to chance coincidence the following:

perveniant, sed quia ipsa perfectio corporis Domini tot diebus ad partum perducta comperitur, sicut a majoribus traditum suscipiens Ecclesie custodit auctoritas. Octavo enim calendas aprilis conceptus creditur, quo et passus . . . Natus autem traditur octavo calendas Januarias."

- K* with L in line 4.
H " IK in line 154.
H " K in line 172.
F " K in line 204.
I " HJ in line 231.

172 and 231, especially, are slips that might very naturally be made by two scribes on account of association of ideas. Tears and to weep are more closely allied than tears and to lete; paying and debts, more allied than paying and rent.

Two other cases I do not feel sure of, namely, J and IK in lines 35 and 232. In 35, J may have altered maistroye to envye to rhyme with destrye, though it would seem as though he must have known of the form maistrye. Possibly he changed cleyme to challenge in 232 to get a dissyllable. On the whole, I am inclined to believe that J and IK show merely chance agreement in these lines, since they do not agree in other readings where chance could not be the explanation.

§ 2. THE B-TEXT

The veracity of the manuscripts of Version B is to be determined both by a comparison of their readings with the corresponding readings in Version A, and by such means as we have already made use of in the analysis of the manuscripts of A. The inter-relations of the manuscripts, however, present a much more complicated problem than we have had to deal with in the case of A, since here it is necessary to reckon with certain agreements in readings that seem at first sight to be due to contamination of manuscripts, but which appear, upon further analysis, to be due to other causes. We shall begin with the test for veracity.

With the aid of the A-text, and in other ways when that source of information failed, I have found that in the following lines we can attain either an absolute or a reasonable certainty as to the reading of the archetype of the various manuscripts of the B-text: 42^a-42^b*, 44*, 74*, 101*, 151-2*, 167-8*, 170*, 172*, 194*, 196*, 200*, 210*, 214*, 227*, 377*; and 121, 171, 186, 241. A comparison with readings in the A-text enables us to determine, in all but one of these lines, 101*, the original reading of B. Line 101 will be considered last:

42^a-42^b*: = A-text 17-18. Correct, mss. C, E, and A, which preserve these lines. They are dropped by mss. B and X.¹⁵

44*, 74*, 172*
194*, 196* } : In all these lines the reading of A is preserved in mss. C and E only; though in 194* the correspondence with A is not exact, the reading of C and E is nearer to A than are the readings of the other manuscripts.

151-2*: = A-text 75-76, preserved most nearly in A, B, D, and X. Lost in C and E.

167-8*: = A-text 89-90. Correct, C and E, which preserve the rhyme word of the A-text.

170*: = A-text 92, preserved in C and E. A, B, D, and X insert here, and D and X introduce "I" in addition, which is also in C and E.

200*: = A-text 118, preserved most nearly in C. A, B, D, and X add else. E is spurious.

210*: = A-text 128. The rhyme word of Version A is preserved in mss. A, B, D, and X. Spurious, *C*¹⁶ and E, though these do not agree.

214*: = A-text 132. C is nearest to Version A in this line.

¹⁵ Since the text of ms. D does not begin before line 69, D will not be mentioned in the discussion of lines earlier than this point. In the same way, mss. C and E will not be mentioned under lines in which they are lacking. C stops with line 248, and E frequently drops couplets and passages throughout the entire poem.

¹⁶ Ms. C has I sende, rhyming with be-hynde.

227*:= A-text 143. Correct, C, E, D, and X. Spurious, A, B.

377*:= A-text 219, preserved in R, and imperfectly in E, B, and D (though B and D do not agree with E). Cf. p. cxv, for discussion of these readings. Spurious, A and X.

Minor Lines.

121:= A-text 61, preserved in C. A, B, D, and X, insert only.

171:= A-text 93. Here ms. G's reading is preserved in C, E, and X. Spurious, A and B. Ms. D is a combination of the readings of C and E and A and B. Cf. p. cxviii. None of the other manuscripts of Version A agree with readings of Version B.

241:= A-text 155, preserved most closely in A, B, and D.

101*:= the word self in mss. C, E, and B, is the correct reading. Soul, in A, D, and X, is manifestly incorrect from the context.

Summing up results, we find that out of a total of sixteen major and four minor readings,

	TRUE MAJOR READINGS	TRUE MINOR READINGS	TOTAL
Ms. C has	12	3	15
Ms. E has	11	2	13
Ms. D has	4	1	5
Ms. B has	4	1	5
Ms. A has	3	1	4
Ms. X has	3	1	4

Ms. C is, therefore, our best manuscript as far as it goes, which unfortunately is only to line 248. It is not remarkably well written; there are lines omitted, evidently by accident, here and there, as 16, 78, 110; and there are besides some very bungling lines, as 9, 116, 152, 238. It needs to be corrected frequently by the aid of the other manuscripts. Ms. E is written with a very free hand. Consequently, in spite of its high rank in the list above, it is not to be depended upon for readings that cannot be tested by Version A or supported by ms. C or by mss. A, B, D or X. Moreover, E frequently drops couplets, and sometimes longer passages. The manuscripts, C and E together, are nevertheless very valuable for constructing a critical text of Version B. Where they agree, they are almost invariably correct; and where they disagree, the preference should, generally speaking, be given to the version which is supported by the other manuscripts.

Let us now examine the manuscript relations of the B-text. In proportion to the length of the B version, there are fewer important variations among the manuscripts than in the A-text, if we except the unique readings of ms. E. I hope to show that B contains three groups, the first two being represented each by a single manuscript, C and E respectively, to the latter of which Version C is particularly related, as will be explained in § 4. The third group comprises mss. A, B, D, and X. The difficulties presented by the readings of this group, together with the results I have reached, will be set forth in the succeeding paragraphs.

From the analysis of lines above, it is evident that A, B, D, and X are differentiated from mss. C and E by the spurious readings of lines 44*, 74*, 167*, 170*, 172*, 194* (A is unique here), 196*, 200*, 214*, and 377*. Since in mss. C and E the readings of these lines agree with Version A, the source of ABDX is responsible for the changes in the four manuscripts.¹⁷

¹⁷ Other lines in which the readings of ABDX vary from those of C and E, though we can not be certain as to whether they are spurious or correct, are these: 1, 61, 182, 281, and 301 (partially). I have pur-

That C and E belong to different groups of Version B is probable from the fact that they do not agree in any reading that we can recognize as spurious.¹⁸ Such agreements as these manuscripts show (and they are many) are uniformly in readings which we have ascertained to belong to the common original.

It is evident that C was not derived from E, for C does not share the peculiarities of E which unite that manuscript to Version C, nor does it bear marks of the editing for which E is so conspicuous, but keeps pretty close to the text, as a comparison of its lines with those of ABDX and of Version A will show. Also, while E drops many couplets and longer passages at times, C gives the whole text as far as line 248, except for a single line accidentally dropped in one or two cases.

posely omitted to mention the readings of 233 and 240. In 233, fifth is, of course, the correct reading, but it would have been very easy for any scribe to have written first, thinking that each point in the enumeration of the seals just preceding was to be separately dealt with, so that it is not safe to use this line as basis for classification. In 240, since my and py could have been interchangeable, a scribe might easily have made a mistake here.

¹⁸ The nearest approaches to such agreement are: a) 225, where E reads thre nayles and C þe nayles, the other manuscripts having yren nayles. But I believe this is explained by a y being read þ, and the stroke over the e being omitted in a manuscript between E and the source; and in C, the likeness to E is probably coincidence. The matter is too uncertain to rely on, especially as the three nails were a well known symbol of the Passion. b) 151-2, where, though C and E are both erroneous (Cf. Version A and ABDX), they do not agree in their readings of the lines. Each seems to have altered independently, perhaps because two very similar lines occur a little later, 155-6. c) Both C and E have but two Latin rubrics (though only one in common) of those which occur at intervals in the A-text; ABDX has retained five. E has written its rubrics not in the text, but in the margin, and has altered one of them from Hoc facite in meam commemorationem to memoriam fecit mirabilium suorum. The second, O vos omnes qui transitis per viam, etc., was so common that the fact of C and E's both having retained it proves no relationship between them. It is a frequent theme in the Complaints of Christ.

The manuscript relations, as ascertained up to this point, may therefore be represented thus:

Let us now examine the manuscripts of ABDX more particularly. In some of the lines of this group it is difficult to distinguish true from spurious readings; but we are enabled to detect many of them by a comparison with the readings of mss. C and E, and also of ms. R of Version C, which, as I have said (p. cxii), is closely related to E. Since in the following discussion of ABDX and its subdivisions, as well as in § 3, I shall frequently have occasion to refer to ms. R to corroborate or to disqualify the readings of ms. E, I here refer the reader to § 4 where R and E are shown to be derived from the same manuscript (γ), and proceed now as if this were already established.

AX agree against B and D in the following readings:

- 1) 20^a-20^b*: These two lines, as has been pointed out, were probably in the original, since both C and ER record them. B contains them, but A and X omit them.
- 2) 112: The variants of the manuscripts here suggest that the reading in ms. β was blurred. AX read loke ye hem preche, B and D read I pray you þem preche; while ms. C reads I bydde þou hem preche. E is very different, and R does not give the line. I believe that C has the original reading, as there seems no good reason for the variants in AX and B and D .

3) 126: The correct reading here is in B and D ; cf. mss. C and R (E omits the line). AX probably represent an attempt to improve the metre.¹⁹

4) 150: The original reading would seem to be that of B and D , since C and R both agree with these manuscripts. AX altered the line by crossing out forth, though the metre is not improved by the emendation.

5) 377*: Here all the manuscripts of $ABDX$ are in error, cf. Version A, and mss. E and R . It would seem as though the w of wroȝte were obscured or lost in β . AX 's source (which we shall call θ) attempted to correct the error with betought, whence ms. X . The scribe of A substituted towȝte, and struck out me. The scribes of B and D did not attempt an emendation.

From these cases, it is evident that mss. A and X agree in the common errors of lines 20^a-20^b* (dropped by AX), 126, 150, 377*, the last three being lines emended by the source of AX from the reading of β . Moreover, line 112, while not offering proof of certain error, nevertheless supports the evidence for a subgroup AX within $ABDX$. As to the other two manuscripts, B and D , it is doubtful whether ¹⁹ A word should be said regarding the readings of line 300. Rest to my head for to make is the reading of B , D , and E , while AX (hence its source) has whereof to make in place of for to make. At first sight, it would seem as though AX 's version were that of the original of the B-text, since the corresponding line 78, in Version A, reads my testament whereof to make. But I believe that Version B's original reading was for to make, because: a) E agrees with B and D in this reading, and b) for to make would be a poor alteration, whereas whereof to make might easily suggest itself to the scribe of AX 's source from the line preceding.

they were derived separately from β , or from an original common to them alone. The only evidence for the latter supposition would be line 112; but here we are on very doubtful ground, for it would have been natural for B and D separately to have applied the word pray to fill the supposed gap in their source. It must be noted that the word order in B and D is the same as that in C ; this is not the case with the word order in AX , which makes the correspondence in these two manuscripts much more significant than that in B and D . On the whole, I am inclined to regard B and D as having no relation except through β .

If my analysis of the manuscripts holds, we may represent the relations of the versions as in the diagram below. For convenience, ms. R (Version C) is included in this plan. I am assuming here that within the group $ABDX$ no manuscript is derived from another. For the proof of this, see p. cxx.

Certain cases of readings which do not accord with this analysis must be examined. These I cite below, with such explanations of the difficulty involved as I am able to offer:

A) The agreement of X with B in a common error.

16: B and X are in error, reading that ye may (or now) know in all your thought. C omits the line. E, R, and A read: may (or most) keep. Here A probably emended know to keep to make better sense.

42^a-42^b*: B and X have both dropped these lines. A retains them. They were in the common original (cf. Version A and mss. C, E, and R where the lines have been altered; see p. cx). The fact that they are redundant may have led B and X independently to omit them.

B) The agreement of A and B in a common error.

227*: This line offers peculiar complications. Mss. A and B agree in a common error, but they are not exactly alike. A reads The sesynge wax was dere y-bowȝt, and B, The sesynge was dere y-boght. The correct reading occurs with unimportant variations in all the other manuscripts, The selyng wexe was dere a-bought.²⁰ I would suggest the following explanation: ms. β read The sesyng wax, ms. θ and ms. A the same. Ms. X corrected the obvious blunder sesyng to selyng, as did D, while B emended erroneously by dropping the word wax. Such an explanation obviates the necessity of supposing contamination in this line.

C) The agreement of A, B, E, and R against C, D, and X.

140: The simplest explanation of the line I believe to be this: the original reading was And alle myn frendys sone me forsoken. C emended to And alle myn frendys me sone forsokn. The source of E and R (γ) emended by dropping sone to make the line smoother. β retained the original reading, followed by D, θ, and X. A and B, however, emended in the same way that γ did, by omitting sone, which is the most obvious thing to do.

D) The agreement of A, B, and C against E, (R), and X.

21: mss. A, B, and C read without great strife. E, R, and X read withouten strife. I would suggest here that the older reading may be that of E, R, and X, and that the other manuscripts, independently of each other, inserted great for metrical reasons, since unless the word without is regarded as having three syllables, the line will not scan.

60: C, A, and B read for to helpe the was all my thought; E and X, the to helpe (E, euver was; X, was al) my thoght. R is unique and quite different. Since the correspondence between E and X is not exact, the readings of these two would seem to be independent emendations for the sake of the metre. Moreover, as there is little likelihood that the line, as it stands in E and X, would have been altered to the other form, the original reading is probably that of C, A, and B.

E) The three readings A and B; C, E, and X; and D.

171: The correct reading is probably Ye men that go forth by the way,²¹ in C, E, and X. A and B have here instead of forth, while D has forth here. The explanation might be that β, after having written forth, preferred here, and set it down right after forth, with a faint line through the rejected reading. θ and D did not see the line and copied both words. B did see it and rejected forth. A and X emended the reading of θ separately, one choosing here and the other forth.

F) E and B against ADX.

101*: The correct reading here is obviously that of C, E, and B: my self, and not my soul. The error soul must have appeared in β. B independently emended the line by restoring self.

287: The original reading of this line (see ms. *E*²² and ²¹ See ms. G, A-text.

the context) was probably The pains that she suffered were full smert. Ms. β introduced a spurious reading, The pains that I had, mistaking the author's meaning, and wishing to use a different expression from that employed just above in line 281. He may have taken line 287 to be merely a repetition of 281. B corrected this to the pains that she suffered, using the word suffered from line 281 again, and not, as I believe, from ms. E.

G) The agreement of E (R) and A against B, D, and X.

312: Here ms. A reads thou shalt stand on my right hand, with ms. E, against thou shalt be soothly on my right hand of B, D, and X. Ms. R does not help us here, as it is quite different: On my reght hand wend sall he.

370: The true reading would seem to be that of E, R, and A, which gives the better interpretation to the author's thought. The emendation will in B, D, and X, instead of belief, was doubtless made for metrical reasons in β. A may have independently altered this to improve the sense; the change would have been a natural one to make.

It will be observed from this analysis that we have nothing except lines 42^a-42^b and 312, to weaken our general argument for the manuscript divisions. I have suggested an explanation of 42^a-42^b; but it must be acknowledged that one could understand better the omission in B and X of the following two lines, 43-4, on the ground of redundancy, than of these two. I cannot, however, accept manuscript contamination as the explanation in these cases; for if B and X are examples of cross influence here, why not in other lines? If the scribe of X were using B, why did he not emend his plain error in line 101; and why, if the scribe of B were using X, does his text contain the error of 227? The same may be said regarding the readings of 312. If A were influenced by E here, why not also in 101 and 227? In the same way, it will be evident from all the lines discussed above as offering special difficulty, that we cannot detect any case of a manuscript showing consistent contamination by another manuscript. Hence we are forced to conclude that, even in the cases of lines 42^a-42^b and 312, cross influence is not a factor, and that these two must be added to the list of coincident readings.

Neither B nor D was derived from A or X, as is shown by the lines 20^a-20^b, 31 (for B), 377*. Neither A nor X was derived from D, as is obvious from D's lack of lines 1-68. A was not derived from B, since B omits lines 42^a-42^b, which A has, and which were in β; nor was X derived from B—see lines 101, and 203 (where B has made an emendation and X retains the common error of Version B and certain manuscripts of Version A. See p. cxxi for full discussion of this line). Finally, X was not derived from A, as we see from lines 16, 140, and 203; nor did A come from X, as is shown by 42^a-42^b and 167.

§3. RELATION OF THE PARENT MANUSCRIPT OF VERSION B TO VERSION A.

It is probable that the source of Version B had its origin either in that A manuscript which was the source of IK and FVHJL, or in a manuscript derived from it. For by line 44, we see that the B-text does not possess the common error of HJL 22; and by 376, that it has not corrected the erroneous reading red, which HJL has done.²³ Again, in 53, Version B does not contain the error of FV 25; and in 42^a it lacks the spurious reading of FVHJL 17. Moreover, in 171 it contains the word forth, which is dropped by the source of FVHJL, but which belonged to the original line (93) as is shown by ms. G. Hence Version B does not derive from any manuscript of FVHJL.

Next, as B shows no agreement with IK in its important divergences from the other A manuscripts, namely in lines 28, 30, 45, 49, 57, 73, 76, 83-4, 94, 100, 147, 158, 162, 193 (= B 56, 62, 81, 87, 103, 140, 152, 161-2, 172, 180, 231, 244, 248, 345), it cannot have been derived from that group.

Finally, B 203 does not agree with ms. G in the reading of line 122 (where G alone has the true reading), but shows the common error of IKFVHJL, in that it records ¹¹ false rhyme of FVHJL, schrift—smert (IK having altered this to hert—smert). One point, however, must be noted in this connection. Mss. A, B, (and R,²⁴ of Version C) have emended this line so as to rhyme hert and smert as was done by IK; see A and B 203-4, and R 277-8. R in particular has made a much better couplet by putting smert in the first line instead of hert, and combining hert with soro in the second line. (See pp. c ff. for comparison with the A-text on this couplet.)²⁵ From the above facts, then, we infer that Version B was not derived from the common source of G and the other manuscripts of Version A (ā).

Since B is not derived from ms. G or its original, or from either one of the subgroups IK and FVHJL, its source must be a non-extant text which was derived, directly or indirectly according to the foregoing evidence, from the source of the subgroups IK and FVHJL. This may be represented as follows:

Certain sporadic common readings of manuscripts of the three groups may be noted. They do not, I believe, show contamination, since there are no other proofs of cross influence between Versions A and B or A and C. They seem to be due merely to coincidence. The most important, perhaps, is the agreement between E 168 and FVH(JL) 90, in the reading black instead of red. Other slight agreements are:

E 86	with Version A, F 48
E 290	" " all mss. 182
{ EBD 300	" " J 178

§ 4. RELATION OF VERSION C TO VERSION B.

We shall now consider the relationship of Version C, or ms. Royal 17. C xvii., to the manuscripts of the B-text.

Version C (or ms. R as I shall call it here to distinguish it from ms. C of Version B), traces its descent from a B manuscript which was closely related to the source of ms. E; for E and R are the only manuscripts containing the following lines:

E 16^a-16^d = R 17-20
E 28^a-28^h = R 35-38; 41-44
E 152^a-152^d = R 209-10; 213-14.

Moreover, E and R record common errors in

E 151-2* = R 207-8
E 200* = R 274
E 210 = R 284
E 212 = R 286 ²⁶
E 217 = R 523

as may be seen by comparing these readings with those of Version A, and with those of the other manuscripts of B. E and R show coincident readings not distinguishable either as errors or as true readings, but not found in the other manuscripts, in lines:

E 145 = R 187
E 281 = R 357
E 301 = R 459

Slight agreements also exist between E and R, as in R 280 = E 206; R 584 = E 380.

* This line is proved to be a common error by the agreement of O and AB(D)X in another reading.

R is an unreliable manuscript, because its scribe, or the scribe of some source of R, has in numerous instances dealt very freely with the text. See, for example, lines 24, 30, 45, 46, 89, 90, 108, etc. On the other hand, sometimes R will seem to be correct where E is apparently incorrect. R is a valuable manuscript for the purpose of checking the readings of E, particularly in those lines that are lacking in C; for (in the last part of the poem) where a reading in R agrees with ABDX, but not with E, we may feel reasonably sure that R is correct and E is not; and vice versa.

R shows one or two coincident readings with ABDX, but they are insignificant, the most important being in line 76, where R agrees in part with ABX 44 against C and E.²⁷

The following is a list of such interpolations made by Version C in the B-text as we have not yet noted in other connections.

Narrative additions	Didactic and moral additions

85-88	Dealing with Seven Sacraments
189-90	291-314
193-204	Dealing with the Eucharist

227-234	Dealing with Penance
237-238	595-96
253-256

²⁷ The others are, R 118 with X 76; R 358 with A 282.

The Texts

The Charter of Christ

In printing the texts, no attempt has been made at emendation, except in a few instances, recorded in the footnotes, where scribal errors are unmistakable. Very few marks of punctuation appear in the manuscripts. In some, for example ms. Add. 11307, periods occur at the end, and sometimes in the interior, of the lines; but as these marks do not appear with regularity the editor has ignored them for the sake of consistency. Dots over y are also ignored. Capitals, except in two or three cases where they occur in the middle of a word, are retained. Certain apparently meaningless tails after various letters, such as those sometimes after f and t in mss. Harl. 2346 and Ash. 189, are not represented; nor are strokes crossing ll and h—except in Ihc which is expanded in the usual manner. Other strokes and curls are expanded according to the editor's understanding of the symbols. In mss. Camb. Univ. Ii. 4. 9., Bod. C. 280, and sometimes in Harl. 237, y and p are written alike: in these cases p has been printed when it properly occurs. The Latin rubrics occurring at intervals in the poems are represented in a uniform type in the printed texts, whether illuminated, underlined, or left unmarked in the mss. The numbering of the lines in the Long Charter is made, for purposes of convenience, to correspond to the numbering in the E. E. T. S. edition.

APPENDIX I

OBSERVATIONS ON THE LANGUAGE OF THE LONG AND SHORT CHARTERS

These observations are based, in each case, upon what I have judged to be the critical reading of the text. Cases where it has been plainly impossible to determine the critical reading have been ignored, and those where a reasonable doubt exists have been especially noticed. The evidence for the pronunciation of final e in the Short Charter and in the B-text of the Long Charter is not offered as conclusive, since in the opinion of the writer there are too many doubtful readings and corrupt lines to enable one to rely upon the results of the tests. In the case of the A-text of the Long Charter, however, it is hoped that the results are reliable, since the manuscripts, in most cases, enable one to arrive at the reading of the original.

THE LONG CHARTER, A-TEXT

§ 1. FINAL e.

A. Rhyme words.

Words ending, in Anglo-Saxon, in final e, rhyme only with others so ending, except in the following cases:¹

- | | | | |
|----|--------------|----------------------|--|
| I. | blod | O-stem, acc. sing. | } in two instances,
77-78; 207-208. |
| | rod | A-stem, acc. sing. | |
| | fode | Wk. stem, acc. sing. | } 59-60. |
| | blode | O-stem, acc. sing. | |

frende	M. Cons. stem, acc. sing.	} 233-234.
ende	M. Jo-stem, acc. sing.
blis	Ja-stem, acc.	} 203-204.
ys	Pres. Indic. 3rd sing.

II. Rhymes containing weyē:^a

(by the) weye	O-stem, acc.	} 93-94.
ye	N. Wk. stem, acc.
(in the) way	O-stem, acc.	} 65-66.
pray	OFr. proie , preie

III. Containing a petrified dative:

(to) grounde	O-stem, dat. sing.	} 191-192.
wounde	A-stem, acc. sing.

B. Final e in the Interior of the Line.

The following cases exist of final e pronounced in the interior of the line; when sounded before a vowel or h, it is marked by an asterisk:

I. Nouns, Singular.

A-Stems.

(a) nom. sing.	(b) in compounds.

louē , 53.	louē -dede(s), 62, 91, 114.
	louē -drynk, 167.

Ja-Stems.

(a) acc. sing.	(b) in compound.
blissē , 230.	hellē -pyne, 229.

^a In Chaucer final e in weyē is frequently sounded; cf. rhymes with infinitives, Canterbury Tales, B 1698, 1747, and Prologue 467, etc.

Weak Stems.

VI. Pronunciation of the plural inflexional endings of verbs (i. e., e, eth [imperative], or en) is necessary to the scansion of lines 71, 81, 95, and to the scansion of 138 and 147, unless the past participles in these lines had the prefix y. Plural inflexional endings in fo and hand, lines 40 and 142, must also have been sounded, as the metre shows.

From the above evidence afforded by the rhyme and metre of the A-text, it is clear that, at the time of its composition, final e was generally sounded. The exceptions noted under A may be regarded as makeshifts of the poet, in the face of the body of evidence on the other side.

§2. DIALECT OF THE ORIGINAL TEXT OF THE EXTANT MANUSCRIPTS

A. The rhymes of the A-text that throw light upon the question of the dialect of the original text are few; but these few are clear evidence as far as they go:

I. That the dialect was not Northern is shown by

(a) the stressed vowels of the following rhyme words: ⁴

³ If my readings for lines 6, 19, and 122 are correct (see pp. c-vii) final e is sounded also in the following cases: withoute, 6; fyue (pl. adj.), 19; smerte (noun) 122. Lines metrically defective are 48 and 220 where two accented syllables fall together: (a) thúrst and chéle; (b) boúr and I. Lines offering difficulties in scansion because of doubtful readings are: 52, 120, 152, 154, 177, 179, 196.

wolde }

y-do fo }	25-26.	so euermo ⁵ }	123-124.
also y-do }	209-210.	gon y-don }	213-214.

(b) the participle go or y-go in line 47, rhyming with wo. In a Northern text the participial form would be gan, and there would be no rhyme.⁶

(c) Contributory evidence in the pronunciation, in certain cases (see §1, BVI.) of plural inflexional endings of verbs.

II. The prefix y in the participle y-do, 25, 50 and 210; y-wryton, 82; y-æue, 109; y-seled, 159; y-pyzt, 161, show Midland or Southern origin, since the prefix is necessary to the scansion of these lines.⁷

III. Final conclusive evidence that the dialect of the common original was Midland is found in the rhyme of lines 87-88, ben (Pres. Indic. 3rd pl.)—sen, which appears in all the extant manuscripts.

⁶The Northern form ga of ms. F is due to the scribe's emending to obtain a Northern rhyme for sua. Of euerma I find no occurrence later than the 13th century, either in the North or South; See O. E. Homilies I (E.E.T.S. Orig. Ser.) p. 165, v. 106, and p. 171, v. 200, and for næfrema see Ormulum 4206 and O. E. Homilies, p. 63, v. 166. The regular Northern form for euermo was euermar(e); See Cursor Mundi 98, 410, 1920, 23934.

⁷I add also to the evidence against Northern origin the contracted form skyft in line 122, ms. G, which I have tried to establish as the correct reading (see pp. c ff). Other contributory evidence is found in the pronunciation of the plural inflexional endings of verbs (e, eth imperative, or en) which is necessary to the scansion of lines 71, 81, and 95, and also to the scansion of 138 and 147, unless the past participles in these lines had the prefix y. Were the prefix y sounded, the fact would also point to Midland or Southern origin.

were (2nd sing. and 3rd sing. pret. Indic.) lines 7 and 50.

sove (adverb) 165.

THE LONG CHARTER, B-TEXT.

§ 1. FINAL e.

A. Rhyme words.

A study of the rhymes in B not occurring in A reveals six cases in which words ending, in Anglo-Saxon, in final e, organic or inflexional, rhyme with words not ending in e:

- | | | |
|---------------------------------|---------------------|------------|
| I. bokē | F. Cons. stem, acc. | } 1-2. |
| loke | Verb, infin. | |
| wende | Verb, infin. | } 3-4. |
| fende | M. nd-stem, acc. | |
| understonde | Verb, infin. | } 17-18. |
| londe | N. O-stem, acc. | |
| seyne (or sowen) | Verb, pp. | } 19-20. |
| owen | Wk. adj. pl. | |
| rode | A-stem, acc. | } 269-270. |
| blode | O-stem, acc. | |
| per | Adv. | } 283-284. |
| chere | OFr. chere | |

II. Special cases:

- (1) explicable as containing petrified dative:

wonde	A-stem, acc.	} 223-224.
grounde	M. O-stem.

- (2) not explicable except as containing the old plural ending e, which is improbable, taken with other evidences of B's age:

werke	N. O-stem, acc. pl.	} 369-370.
kyrke	F. Wk. stem, acc. sing.
bryng	Verb, infin.	} 413-414.
thyng	N. O-stem, acc. pl.

III. B has retained the rhymes of A with three exceptions: lyf-lyf 45-46, which B alters to dede (adj.) -þe quede 81-82, evidently to avoid the identical rhyme; fode-blode 59-60, to blode-mode 107-108; and blode-rode 77-78 to blode-stode 153-154.

These last two cases might be regarded as emendations of B to restore true rhymes, but that in the first case changes made by B in the lines immediately preceding seem naturally to lead to a different rhyme here; and that in the second, B seems to have broken the rhyme in order to introduce more detail, the progress of the narrative in A being at this point very rapid. Moreover, in another place, B retains this same rhyme of A (A 207-208, B 355-356), which seems to show that he was not aware of its irregularity.

B. Final e in the Interior of the Line.

The scansion of the B-text is, in general, difficult, because (a) the manuscripts frequently offer several different readings for the same line, and (b) the lines are often manifestly corrupt. Moreover, since certain lines not involving a final e scan only when the stress is placed awkwardly, it is possible that some of those cited below, which scan well only when final e is sounded,⁸ were not intended to contain any final e syllable, as 35, 83, 91, 130 and 358. The critical readings, however, would indicate that in the following cases final e was probably sounded in the original of the extant manuscripts:

I. Nouns

A-stems, nom. acc.

sowlē, 4, 69,* 402.

Ja-stem.

blyssē, 412.

Weak stems.

hertē, 338; in compound,

Joyē, 197.*
placē, 408.

⁸ As lines 11, 261, and 403.

N. O-stem, acc. sing. (which took e in the Troilus *) Sothē, 315.

II. Verbs

Infinitives

helpē, 35, 83; fyndē, 89, 358; spoylē, 133; repentē, 329; demē, 369*; sekē, 408*; put[ē or en] ? 403.

Pres. Ind. first sing.

Pret. Ind. 3rd plur.
madē, 145.

Pres. Ind. 3rd sing.
woldē, 91.

2nd Optative sing.
payē, 211.

Pret. Ind. 1st sing.
haddē, 95; most[ē], 318.

III. Adjectives

Strong:

sing. myldē, 108.

plur. gretē, 130.

fewē, 96.

allē, 414.

Weak, plur. ownē, 240.¹⁰

On the other hand, the following lines, in which final e was pronounced in the A-text, have been altered in the B-text, apparently to avoid final e's counting as a syllable: 40, 42^b, 88, 93, 104, 122, 136, 194, 214, 216, 222, 350, 379 (corresponding to A 14, 18, 50, 53, 58, 62, 68, 114, 132, 134, 140, 198, 221). Certain lines in A requiring the pronunciation of final e were taken over by B, however, without alteration: A 10, 17, 21, 54, 77, 91, 119, 126, 148, 149,

* See Kitt. Observ. p. 44.

¹⁰ Lines difficult of scansion are, for example: 11, 13, 78, 107, 252, 269, 283, 388.

157, 194, 203 = B 34, 42*, 43, 94, 153, 169, 201, 208, 232, 233, 243, 346, 351.

From the above inconsistent evidence it hardly seems safe to draw conclusions as to the pronunciation of final e at the time of the composition of the B-text. Such evidence as there is, however, appears to indicate a general laxity of usage in this respect.

§2. DIALECT OF THE ORIGINAL B-TEXT.

The stressed vowels in the following rhymes indicate Midland or Southern origin for the B-text:

ydo	}	95-96	wo	}	275-276.
po			ydo
	}	283-284.		}
per			chere
more	}	99-100.	two	}	397-398.
forlore			do

On the other hand, the text contains one rhyme with the Northern k from AS. c:

werke	}	369-370.
kyrke

The indications of Midland or Southern origin noted above are corroborated by the prefix y in y-do, lines 95, 276, and perhaps in y-spoke, 333, though the evidence supplied by the prefix is not in itself altogether reliable, since the scansion of the original is not certain.

THE LONG CHARTER, C-TEXT.

The following rhymes occurring in portions of the C-text which are not found in the B-text, indicate a Midland or Southern original for this version, though the unique manuscript is chiefly Northern:

þore }
before } 87-88; 227-228.

fro }

underfong }
tong } 133-134.

The rhyme do-so, 131-132, is of particular interest, since it represents a scribe's attempt to join two portions of text that seem not to be in proper sequence. Line 132 appears to be of this scribe's own composition, and the rhyme indicates that he was not a Northern man (cf. p. lxxxix).

Two occurrences of one distinctly Northern rhyme, however, are found:

werke }
kyrke } 297-298; 305-306.

THE SHORT CHARTER.

§ 1. FINAL e.

A. Rhyme words.

The following words ending in Anglo-Saxon in final e occur in rhyme with words that did not:

ending A-stem, acc. } kyng O-stem, nom. } 9-10.

seckernesse acc. } is verb. 3rd sing. } 31-32.

here adv. }
dere pl. adj. in the pred. } 1-2.

Doubtful cases:

smerte noun, acc. sing. }
herte wk. noun, acc. sing. } 11-12.

The critical reading here would make smerte a noun. Compare Kittredge, Observations on the Language of Chaucer's Troilus,¹¹ who believes the form in final e to be an adjective. Mss. E and I insert paynes before smerte.

Rhymes Occurring in Particular Manuscripts.

dette	OFr.	} e-f. Mss. A and B only.
sett	Past part.
ending	A-stem, acc.	} 9-10. Ms. L only.
reynynge	Pres. part in pred.

B. Final e in the Interior of the Line.

Critical readings indicate that final e was pronounced in the following cases:

sayë, inf., 17; whichë or samë, wk. adj. sing., 29; ownë, wk. adj. sing., 30; morë, wk. adj. sing., 31; firstë, wk. adj. sing., 34.

Cases of doubtful scansion, where final e may have been sounded, are:

hauë Pres. Ind. 1st sing., 7, 18.
gyfe Infin. 15.

The plural inflexional ending es in woundës, 5, and stonës, 24, were also probably sounded.

In view of such incomplete lines (metrically) as 10 and 28, it is uncertain whether final e was actually sounded or not in the cases mentioned in this paragraph; but see the next paragraph.

§2. DIALECT OF ORIGINAL TEXT.

The dialect of the original text was Northern, as is shown by the vowels in the stressed syllables of the two rhymes:

¹¹ Chaucer Society, Ser. 2. vol. XXVIII, 140-1, note.

quake	Infin.	} 23-24.
brake	Pret. Indic. 3rd pl.
thing	Noun, acc.	} 29-30.
hyng	Pres. Indic. 1st sing.

and in corroboration

seckernesse	} 31-32.
is (would have been es)

The fact that the dialect was Northern makes it probable that final e was sounded only in cases where the metre made it indispensable.

4. CARTA CELESTIS HEREDITATIS

(A Prose Tract, related to the Charter of Christ.)

This treatise, entitled variously, Carta Celestis Hereditatis, Chartre of Heuene, Charter of oure heuenli Eritage, Chartre of Heven Blisse, Diploma Caeli, forms part of the Poor Caitiff, a work comprising a series of tracts, which has been ascribed to Richard Rolle,¹ to Wycliff,² and to an unknown friar. So far as I know, the earliest mss. date from the fourteenth century, and there are several of the fifteenth century.³ On a "spare page" at the beginning of one of the manuscripts, Harl. 2336, is the following: Dixit Episcopus Cicestrensis quod Frater Minor compilavit hunc librum in suo Defensorio. The compiler of the Harleian Catalogue from which I obtained this information, adds: "I doubt not but that this Bishop of Chichester was Reginald Pecok, who was thought to favor the Lollards, and was openly persecuted and deprived, as guilty of Heresy." It will be seen that the Carta of the Poor Caitiff is not a charter, in spite of its name, but a tract which discusses the Charter of Christ, its component parts, etc., and urges man to be mindful of it and to study it. Its relation to the Charter of Christ has been discussed in Chapter II.⁴

¹ See Cat. of Camb. Univ. MSS., Vol. III (1858) under the description of MS. II. 6. 40, where this treatise is recorded with the title, A Charter of remission, and ascribed to Richard Rolle.

² By Mr. Wharton, according to Cat. Harl. MSS. of Brit. Mus. 1808, under MS. 1706. I do not know where Mr. Wharton makes this statement. This is ascribed to Wycliffe also by Robert Vaughan (John de Wycliffe, D. D., 1853, Appendix, p. 533). See also Cat. of Ash. MSS. under MS. 1286, and Report Hist. MSS. Com. VIII (London, 1881) App. part III, 101, under Ashburnham MS. Add. 27d. Compare with these, Shirley, Fasciculi Zizanorum, Rolls Series (London, 1858), p. xiii, note 3 (referred to in this connection by ed. of Cat. of Stowe MSS., 1895, Vol. I, 23).

³ The two oldest of which I have record are: MS. Ashburnham Add. 27d (See Report Hist. MSS. Com. VIII. App. part III, 101) of the fourteenth century. The others are MS. Bod. 4 (of which I do not know the date); MSS. Ashmole 1286 (about 1400); Douce 13, 288, 322; Rawl. C. 751; Bod. 938 (See Horstman, Richard Rolle I, 3), all of the fifteenth century; MSS. Harl. 1706, 2322, 2335, 2336, 4012, of which I do not know the dates; MS. Add. (Brit. Mus.) 30897, MS. Stowe 38, both of the fifteenth century; Camb. Univ. MSS. Ff. 5. 45, Ff. 6. 34, II. 6. 40, Hh. 1. 12, all of the fifteenth century; Bibl. Nat. Paris, MS. angl. 41, fol. 95^a ff.

⁴ John Bale has the following entry concerning another charter of the fourteenth century: "Brendanus monachus et abbas Hibernus, scrip-Poole, Oxf. 1902, pp. 49-50; and Script. Illus. . . . Catalogus (post. pars), Basilae, 1559, p. 238. Concerning this work, Dr. Gustav Schirmer (Zur Brendanus Legende, Leipzig, 1888, pp. 10-11) expresses the opinion that the Carta coelestis hereditatis can not be attributed to St. Brendan. I have no means of arriving at a knowledge of the contents of this charter; but it would seem to me probable that it is a version of the Carta Coelestis hereditatis. The initial sentence of the Carta of Brendanus and that in the Poor Caitiff suggest a common origin, the Poor Caitiff Charter beginning, in one version, "Euery wise man þat cleymeþ his eritage," and in another (ms. Douce 13) "Everie wise man that deynieth his heritage."

GLOSSARY OF SPECIAL WORDS

BS = Bradley-Stratmann's Mid. Eng. Dict. BT = Bosworth and Toller's Old Eng. Dict. NED = New Eng. Dict. A = Long Charter, A-Text; B = Long Charter, B-Text. The numbers refer to lines in the texts. The glossary aims only at furnishing a convenient record of unusual terms and of special meanings of common words, and the above authorities have been freely used in compiling it.

abye: infin. [OE. a + bycgan], suffer, pay the penalty. B 66.

a-party (-i): adv. [a prep. + party > Fr. partie], in part, somewhat, a little. A 199.

aplyzt (-plight): adv. [a prep. + OE. plight], in faith, truly, certainly, surely. B, MS. C 14.

as-tyte (-tite; also spelled erroneously -tight(e), tyȝte, tyht, etc., cf. NED): adv. [North. as + tite Scand. cf. ON. titt, frequently, etc.], immediately. B 14.

bykeȝe: noun [perhaps from OE. bi-cwide, proverb, fable, tale <ME. by-quide, bi-cwide, also spelled beqwede, biqwethe, becweȝe, etc.]? bequest. A, MS. G 209. Bykeye (-kaye) of the other MSS. of A is probably intended for the same word.

demed: vb. 1. sing. pret. [OE. dēman], to decree, ordain, appoint. A, MSS. IK 15.

demytted: vb. 1. sing. pret. [Lat. dēmittere, cf. OFr. demetre], fig. sig., to humble, abase. But the NED gives no example of this word earlier than 16th cent., and of this meaning none before 17th cent. A 15.

fand (fondede): vb. 3. sing. pret. [OE. fandian, ȝefandian], to test, put to the proof, tempt, try. A 29.

fray: noun [aphetic from affray, effray > OFr. effrei, esfrei], assault, attack. A 196.

me: error for By. A, mss. F, H, I, K, L 23.

mistayle: noun [OFr. mestaille], evil plight. A, ms. I 131.

neb: noun [OE. nebb], face. A 83.

piht (pyȝt, y-piht, y-pyȝt, etc.); vb. pp. [ME. picche (n) prob. from OE. picc(e)an* of 1st wk. cl., pret. pihte*. The NED says there is no recorded instance of this word in OE., nor in cognate languages], placed, set, driven into the ground, set up, etc. A 75, 161; B 247.

scryt(e): noun [aphetic from OFr. escrit], a writing, written document. A 193.

sesyng (saysing, etc.): verbal noun [OFr. saisir, seisir], the act of taking possession of, investing or establishing in a holding. A 24, 25, 34, 105; B 39, 50, 53, 185.

skift: vb. 3 sing. pres. Ind., syncopated form [OE. sciftan], to ordain, act, devise (with intran. sense). The ordinary trans. meaning is, to change, move, shift. Cf. pp. civ. f. A, ms. G 122.

strayste: error for strait (?)te. A, ms. I 78.

wen (wēne?): adj. [OE. (or-)wāna = Goth. (us-)wēna, ON. vānn, OHG. (ur-)wani], hopeful, beautiful. BS gives but one example of this word, in the comparative degree. Cf. p. xcv. A, mss. F, G 90. In OE. BT records the form wēn-līc, fair, handsome, comely.

VITA

I, Mary Caroline Spalding, daughter of the Rev. Charles Nelson Spalding, D. D., and Mary Hewetson Appleton Spalding, was born in San Francisco, California, on February 23rd, 1877.

I was prepared for college at Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wisconsin, and entered Vassar College in 1897, taking the A. B. degree in 1901. During the years 1897 to 1899, I held a scholarship at Vassar College awarded by Kemper Hall; and from 1899 to 1901, a Vassar undergraduate scholarship.

In 1906, I entered graduate courses at Bryn Mawr College. From 1908 to 1910 I held a graduate scholarship in English at Bryn Mawr College, and was awarded the Fellowship in English for the year 1910-1911. I attended the Summer School of the University of Chicago in 1908.

My graduate work in the major subject, English Philology, has been directed by Professor Carleton Brown, and Dr. Samuel Moore, and in the minor subjects, English Literature and Old French, by Professor A. H. Upham and by Professor Richard T. Holbrook. My examinations for the degree of Ph. D. were taken in May, 1912.

From 1901 to 1910, I was Instructor in English (and during the first three years, in Mathematics also) at the Misses Shipley's School, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

In 1910, I published an article entitled Landericus and Wachterius in the Publications of the Modern Language Association, for March of that year, Vol. xxv, pp. 152-163.

The accompanying dissertation was presented to the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College in May, 1912, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Further information relating to it, and special acknowledgments of aid received in the preparation of it, will be found in the Preface.
